SHANGHAI TO BENEFIT BY NEW U.S. AIR MAIL SERVICE

International Route Is Opened In Northwest With Canada

DELIVERY AT SEA

Postal Consignments To Be Put On Steamers After Sailing

SAVING OF TIME

Linking Of Seattle With Vancouver Shortens Time To Orient

Postmaster E. H. Everett of the American Post Office has received notification that the American Government is now establishing its first international air service between the cities of Seattle, Washington and Vancouver, British Columbia in Canada, and a detail in connection with the new service that is of first importance to Shanghai and the Far East generally is that it is planned to catch steamers with fast mails after they have sailed from the two ports. This, it is understood, will be done with hydroaeroplanes.

Both Seattle and Vancouver are located a considerable distance from the open sea, Seattle something over a hundred miles, and Vancouver somewhat farther, so that after ships sail from these ports they travel for a period of hours in comparatively smooth water sheltered by Vancouver Island.

DELIVERY AT SEA

This makes it possible in this portion of the Pacific Coast to employ hydroaeroplanes in the new air mail service, for from eight to ten hours after a ship has sailed from Seattle or from the city of Victoria, the last port Canadian vessels outbound touch, they can be overtaken in the Straits of Juan de Fuca where late mail consignments may be delivered to them with little or no delay. Details of how the new service is to be worked out have not yet been received here.

The notification received at the American Post Office yesterday stated that Mr. Otto Praeger, United States Assistant Postmaster General, who has charge of the transportation of all United States mails, has sent the superintendent of the American Air Mail Service to Vancouver to complete arrangements with Canadian postal authorities for the opening of the new service.

"The opening up of air mail routes in the United States," said Postmaster Everett yesterday, "has brought about a quickening of service generally and has been found to be of tremendous advantage in expediting the handling of mails." He spoke of the achievements of the American air mail service in the eastern states which has suffered little or no interruption since it was inaugurated and has as well been singularly free from mishaps either to the mailmen fliers or to valuable mail consignments.

SEES BETTER SERVICE

"The opening of the international air mail service with Canada in the northwest," he said cannot result otherwise than as a distinct improvement in our mail service here. It may at times shorten the distance between the Pacific Coast and the Far East by as much as a day."

Mr. Everett could not say exactly when the new service would go into effect, but he was of the opinion that arrangements now practically have been completed and that at most the time when the new air mail routes will be opened can be measured in days.

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 8.—A program of considerable expansion is noted in Dutch shipping circles. Forthcoming arrangements include the early supplementing of the Royal West Indian Company's existing services to Surinam with cargo sailings.

Three Dutch companies are inaugurating a joint service from Hamburg to Java and the Lloyd-Royale Belge line has restarted sailings from Rotterdam and Antwerp to the Straits and China.

Franco-Belgian Pact For Defense Against Germany

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, August 11.—According to the Berlin press, the Franco - Belgian Military Agreement, which has been signed by the military chiefs of the two countries, forms a purely defensive alliance which will only come into force in the case of unjustifiable aggression by Germany.

The question of the organisation of the military forces of the two countries has not been approached, the newspapers state, but will be settled in due course by the two countries to their best mutual interests.

Washington, August 9.—The leaders of the Woman Suffrage movement have received information from Nashville, Tennessee, that enough votes have been pledged in the State Legislature to ensure the passage of the Women's Suffrage Bill at the forthcoming special session.

This will automatically bring Women's Suffrage into force throughout the United States, since, with the adhesion of a number of other States, the Tennessee vote provides the required majority.

METHODISTS HERE GET $7,500,000

Executive Committee Meets September To Distribute Funds Given China

Details of the plans for spending the $7,500,000 allotted to China by the Centenary Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be discussed at a meeting of the executive committee to be held in Shanghai on September 11. Though $7,500,000 was the original allotment, it is believed that later gifts will raise it to a much higher figure. The meeting will be presided over by Bishop W. S. Lewis, who is to arrive here on September 10 on the s.s. Empress of Asia.

Tentative plans for increasing the educational, medical and evangelistic work of the Methodist Episcopal missions by means of the Centenary funds were made at the Program Statement Conference held in Peking last February. These will be revised and completed at the September meeting. The executive committee will also appoint a Chinese to take charge of the great Stewardship Campaign to be held in the Chinese churches this fall, with a view to making them self-supporting. The members will be asked to volunteer a gift of one-tenth of their incomes for religious work.

Dr. A. J. Bowen, president of the University of Nanking, and Dr. George L. Davis, head of the Methodist evangelistic work in North China, will also return on the Empress of Asia.

Party Also Shown Temple Of Confuciu; Before Leaving City

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Nanking, August 11.—This ancient city will not soon forget the visit of the Congressional party, which has just concluded. In anticipation of the visit Tuchun I Shun spent $30 000 in spring-cleaning the city. The Drum Tower had a haircut and a brilliant coat of red paint and the grass and shrubs were removed from the battlements.

The Ming tombs were refurbished, the courts scraped and fresh red paint lavishly applied.

Twenty automobiles and chauffeurs from Shanghai electrified the crowds which extra police kept in the side streets.

STREETS ARE FIXED

The food for the series of luncheons and dinners, with the waiters, was also from Shanghai. Sore spots along the streets were eliminated or concealed with mats. The result was highly impressive on the visitors.

This morning the Ming tombs, the Chamber of Commerce, the bazaar and the Temple of Confucius were visited and the party was entertained to luncheon by the teachers of the College.

The Congressmen find that, as a result of the interview, given by Mr. C. H. Randall on the subject of "Dry America," only grape juice is served anywhere. They believe this is carrying things too far and trust that Mr. Randall's influence does not extend to Japan. They also privately express the hope that the entertainment in Japan will be limited in extent and menu.

HAVE SPECIAL TRAIN

The party has left by special train for Chufu, the birthplace of Confucius, were they will make a short visit, they will then visit Tsinanfu, afterwards proceeding to Peking.

A Korean delegation from Shanghai arrived at Nanking, hoping to interview the Congressmen, but they were disappointed because a full program precluded their reception. They will leave tomorrow for Peking to renew the attempt.

In spite of the sultry weather and the continuous entertainment, all the members of the party are in excellent health.

Nation's Resources To Be Shown In London Exhibition

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 9.—The House of Commons this evening adopted a resolution, authorising the payment of £100,000 as the Government's share of the guarantee fund in connection with the forthcoming British Empire Exhibition.

Mr. F. G. Kellaway, Parliamentary Secretary for overseas Trade moving the resolution, said that there was no better way of celebrating the great part played by the Empire in the war than the holding in London of this exhibition of the Empire's manifold resources and the activities of its peoples.

The guarantee was conditional on a guarantee of £500,000 being forthcoming from private sources, and there was every reason to believe that that sum would be found. It was necessary that our manufacturers should find new markets and our greatest hope in this matter lay in the Empire.

Democrat Candidate For Vice-President Takes Broad View Of Nation's Responsibilities In Foreign Lands (Reuter's Se...

New York, Augu... course of an addr... tion with the not... nomination as D... date for the Vice-Presidency, Mr. Franklin Roosevelt made an interesting reference to America's participation in the world problem.

He warned the United States against a retrogressive foreign policy.

Mr. Roosevelt declared that shutting their eyes to their world responsibilities would have for result the selling of the newly-built merchant marine to a more far-seeing Power, the crushing armaments.

The United States, he said, would then live, as the Orient used to live, a hermit nation, dreaming of the past.

As an alternative Mr. Roosevelt urged: "We must open our eyes and see that it is impossible to avoid, except by monastic seclusion, those honorable and intimate foreign relations which the fearful-hearted shudderingly miscall international complications."

Stevens Consortium Agent For American Government

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, August 12.—The American Legation has received the following telegram from the State Department: "Mr. Frederick, W. Stevens of Ann Arbor, Michigan, has been appointed by the American group its resident representative in Peking in connection with Consortium affairs. Mr. Stevens will proceed to Peking immediately after the Bankers' Conference at New York in October."

Mr. Stevens is a well-known American lawyer. He was associated for some time with J. P. Morgan and Co., New York.

During the recent fighting a report was published in a Peking paper that Chen Shou-tang, Chancellor of the Cabinet, had been summarily executed by the orders of Marshal Tuan Chi-jui. It is now stated that Chen Shou-tang died from neutral causes after his arrest owing to his telling Marshal Tuan Chi-jui that, if he resorted to fighting, he would inevitably be defeated. It appears that Chen Shou-tang was a man of exemplary character and a fearless advocate of a Liberal Government.

CHANG GETS POST

It is reported that Chin Yun-peng has dismissed Chang Po-yin who was appointed assistant secretary to the cabinet on General Hsu Shu-tseng's urgent recommendation. Yang Hsun-chiang will replace Chang Po-yin as assistant secretary. Kou Tze-yun remains chief secretary of the cabinet.

Up to the present the president has not given official support to General Wu Pei-fu's proposal for a National Convention but he has now referred the matter to Chang Chih-tan, the newly-appointed minister of the interior, for report, after which the proposal will be considered by the cabinet.

The cabinet this morning discussed the question of Vice-Ministers. It is understood that Cheng Lu will remain Vice-Minister of the Waichiaopu.

Ho Yun will be Vice-Minister of the Interior, and Chu Tso-hsin and Pan Fu Vice-Ministers of Finance while the President's brother, Hsu Shih-jang, will become Vice-Minister of Communciations. The other Vice-Ministries have not yet been settled.

AMBASSADOR ARRIVES

Peking, August 12.—Sir Charles Eliot, the British ambassador to Japan, arrived in Peking from Korea this morning. Mr. R. H. Clive arrived at the same time from Peitaiho.

The city gates were closed this morning owing to a large number of soldiers of the 15th Division, returning from Paotingfu where they had been disbanded, attempting to enter the city.

There are serious delays in the passenger train service on the Peking-Mukden Railway owing to the movements of General Chang Tso-lin's troops to Manchu where the Hunghutze are causing trouble.

PLAN WARSAW DEFENSE

National Council Offers General Weygand High Command Of Army

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, August 11.—The Russians are making a sweeping enveloping movement to invest Warsaw. Russian cavalry has cut the railway at Ciechocinek on the left bank of the Vistula, a few miles from the Prussian frontier, and is moving on Warsaw along the railway.

Unless a swift decision on peace preliminaries is reached at the Minsk negotiations, a battle before Warsaw appears imminent.

Paris, August 11.—The Petit Parisien learns that Mr. Lloyd George, in the course of his statement in the House of Commons yesterday on the Russian situation, said notably that, if the Minsk conference failed, the Allies would provide Poland with military advisers and would exercise economic pressure against Soviet Russia. This would undoubtedly be effected by international action.

SOVIET'S DEMANDS

Mr. Lloyd George, the journal adds, announced that he had just received from M. Kameneff a communication, containing the Soviet's terms to Poland. The five principal points are as follows:

(1) The reduction of the Polish ... to ... men and the demobilisation of the remainder ...

(2) The surrender to Russia of all arms except those necessary for the maintenance of the army, the strength of which in fixed as above.

(3) Poland is forbidden to receive troops or war material from abroad.

(4) Russia shall have access to Baltic ports by passage through Polish territory, particularly by the use of the Bielostok line.

(5) Russia agrees to reduce her effectives on the Polish frontier and to leave her troops on a line, almost identical with that indicated by Lord Curzon on July 2.

Finally, the Petit Parisien writes, the peace terms provide for the granting of land to the relatives of Polish soldiers killed in the war.

DEFENSE COUNCIL

Paris, August 11.—The Polish National Council of Defense has held a meeting at which most important measures were outlined for the defense of the capital. The Council offered General Weygand the supreme command and charge of the operations. The Petit Parisien learns that the General has not declined the proposal but has made certain conditions, the principal being the temporary evacuation of Eastern Galicia.

London, August 10.—Nothing is known up to the present with regard to yesterday's Cabinet meeting but the Daily Express endeavors to lift a corner of the veil, declaring that the danger of war between Great Britain and Russia is ended, that representations will be made to the Soviet and that, if the Russians maintain the integrity of Poland, the outstanding difficulties are capable of solution.

STATEMENT AWAITED

Further speculation is, however, useless for the moment, pending Mr. Lloyd George's statement in the House of Commons this afternoon and the result of the Russo-Polish negotiations at Minsk tomorrow. There is undoubtedly an optimistic feeling regarding the probable results.

A Labor "Council of Action" will meet Mr. Lloyd George today but, as the question of war may be practically ruled out by that time, there is every likelihood that the Premier will be able to give satisfactory assurances.

Soviet's Terms

(Reuter's Service)

Mr. Lloyd George told the House that he had just received from M. Kameneff the terms of the armistice and peace preliminaries, which would be submitted at Minsk by the Russians, although M. Kameneff had added that these terms might be supplemented by details of secondary movement.

The following were the terms:

(1) The strength of the Polish armies must be reduced to one annual contingent up to 50,000 men and the commands and administration of the army to aggregate 10,000 men.

(2) Demobilisation to take place within one month.

(3) All arms, over such as may be required for the reduced army as well as for a civic militia, shall be handed over to Soviet Russia.

(4) All war industries shall be demobilised.

(5) No troops or war materials shall be allowed to come from abroad.

(6) Facilities to be placed at the disposal of Russia for commercial transit to and from the Baltic.

(7) Free land to be granted to the dependents of Polish soldiers killed in the war.

On the other hand, parallel with the demobilisation of the Polish army, the Russian and Ukrainian troops shall be withdrawn from the Polish front.

Upon the termination of these operations the number of Russian troops on the Russian frontier line shall be considerably reduced, and fixed at a figure to be agreed upon.

The armistice line shall be the status quo, but not further east than the one indicated in Lord Curzon's note of July 20. The Polish army shall withdraw to a distance of 50 versts from that line, the zone between being neutral.

Finally, the frontier of the independent State of Poland shall, in the main, be identical with the line indicated in Lord Curzon's note of July 20, but additional territory shall be given to Poland on the East.

Soviet Begins Negotiations In Hope Of Securing Return Of Vessels

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, August 11.—The Russians have opened negotiations with the Japanese with regard to the return of the ships, confiscated on April 5, when the Japanese occupied Vladivostok.

A temporary agreement has been concluded with the Japanese for the return of all the ships without armament. The terms of the agreement provide that the Russians shall not arm the ships returned or any acquired in future without the knowledge of the Japanese and that Russian ships, leaving the port for patrol-work, must notify the Japanese of the duration of the cruise and their destination.

The Social Revolutionary Party, which until recently has withheld from the Coalition Cabinet, has now joined the Cabinet and will receive the portfolios of the Ministries of Justice, the Interior and Argiculture.

INDEPENDENCE OF POLAND TO BE PARAMOUNT

Lloyd George Denies That Attack On Russians Was Encouraged

SHOULD PAY PENALTY

Aggressors Must Retain Self-Government But Settle, Briton's View

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 10.—The House of Commons was crowded this afternoon, Mr. Lloyd George was warmly cheered on entering the House. MM. Krassin and Kameneff were present in the Strangers' Gallery.

Mr. Lloyd George at the outset expressed himself as still hopeful of peace but said that, in view of the fact that the House would rise at the end of the week, he proposed to indicate the government's intentions in certain contingencies.

In the course of a brief restatement of the position, he repeated the opinion, voiced on earlier occasions, that the Polish attack was unjustified.

WARNED BY ALLIES

The Allies considered, Mr. Lloyd George said, that the Soviet government were entitled to take into account in the peace conditions the fact that the Poles not only attacked Russia but did so in spite of British and French warnings.

The Soviet was entitled to demand guarantees against the repetition of a similar attack. But nothing could justify reprisal or punishment which was destined to wipe out the aggressors' national existence.

The Prime Minister proceeded to elaborate this argument, distinguished between guarantees exacted against repetition of acts of aggression, and terms involving destruction of national independence.

MUST UPHOLD FREEDOM

In Poland's case, Mr. Lloyd George continued, Europe had furthermore to be considered. The independence of Poland was an essential part of the structure of European peace.

Poland's extinction could not be regarded with indifference by any nation interested in preserving the peace of Europe. A repartition of Poland would not only be a crime, but a peril.

"Both those contingencies," said the Prime Minister, "must be considered as the basis of our policy."

Mr. Lloyd George next summarised the events leading up to the Soviet's refusal of a truce.

He remarked that the Poles had asked for an armistice on July 22. The Soviet fixed July 30 which was a quite unnecessary lapse of time, if there had been a real desire to stop fighting and a real desire for peace.

DESCRIBES SITUATION

The Prime Minister described the subsequent events leading up to the statement of the Soviet government that they preferred to negotiate with the Poles at Minsk.

This was the position confronting the Hythe Conference. The first proposition on which the Conference agreed was that the sole purpose of the Allied policy was to secure peace on the basis of the independence of ethnographical Poland.

The Hythe Conference had advised Poland to endeavor to negotiate an armistice and peace, so long as the independence of ethnographical Poland were recognised.

If the Poles negotiated an agreement at Minsk, the Allies did not propose to upset the arrangements.

MUST BE FAIR

The Allies could not support Poland. If the latter refused conditions which the Bolsheviki were entitled to exact, but a different situation arose, if the Soviet insisted on terms in absolute conflict with the independence of Poland as a free nation.

Mr. Lloyd George pointed out that unless we abandoned the whole basis of the League of Nations, we could not remain disinterested, when the life of a member of the League was jeopardised.

The League convenant contemplated economic pressure as a means of assistance as distinct from a great war and conscription.

We were morally bound to support an Allied nation whose national existence was challenged, especially where the additional danger arose of a great aggressive Soviet Empire conterminous with Germany.

Mr. Lloyd George said that he would be blind, indeed reckless, if he neglected to calculate the contingency that whatever the Soviet Republic was yesterday, is today and will be tomorrow, it becomes a militarist power when it rejects a peace conference and introduces annexationist conditions.

MUST ACCEPT ADVICE

The prime minister proceeded to indicate the Allies' intentions and said that no action would be taken except for the purpose of supporting the struggle for Poland's existence and independence.

After sympathetic references to the difficulties with which Poland was faced in her renaissance and the blunders of inexperienced statesmanship, Mr. Lloyd George emphdsised that the Poles must accept the advice and direction of people who had had four years' experience of the greatest war the world had ever seen.

"We are sending no Allied troops to Poland," the Prime Minister pursued. "We have made this clear to Poland, and further it will be unnecessary, if the Polish resources are thoroughly organised in case the Bolsheviki impose conditions inconsistent with national freedom and existence, the Allies will, out of the stores at their disposal, help to equip the Polish people for their own defense.

"They will be supplied with the necessary military advice and guidance and we should exercise economic pressure upon Soviet Russia to release her stranglehold upon the life of Poland."

POSITION OF AMERICA

Mr. Ben Tillet, Labor, interrupting, asked:

"What will be the position of America?"

Mr. Lloyd George replied that he was certain that whatever difference of opinion might be in America with regard to the League of Nations, there would be no difference of opinion in their general attitude towards Polish independence.

Mr. Lloyd George proceeded to state that the government would give General Wrangel, who was making a very formidable attack from South Russia, substantial support from the large stores at our disposal which, hitherto, we had not allowed to reach him.

This was a point on which we insisted in the event of the Minsk negotiations breaking down and if we were compelled to take steps to cut off Russia from the outside world, there would be an end of any trade negotiations.

The prime minister went on to refer to the Labor deputation which had visited him this morning. He said he had gathered from them that the government were supposed to be engaged in a reactionary conspiracy to destroy a democratic government representing peasants and workers.

SOVIET NOT CHRISTIAN

Mr. Lloyd George quoted the Hon Bertrand Russell, the socialist leader, who had visited Russia, to show that the Soviet government was neither socialist, democratic nor Christian, and that the working classes were in a condition approximating in many respects to slavery.

The prime minister concluded by saying:

"The Bolshevik government, if it wants peace, can get it. I think they are divided. In every land you get men who urge wild, extravagant and irrational views. The whole point is whether these men are in a minority, for they are merely out to destroy. If you have a real desire for peace, you will get it. If you are out to challenge the basis on which the liberties of Europe depend, you will fail."

The prime minister received an ovation on resuming his seat.

UNCALLED FOR ATTACK

Mr. Asquith, who followed Mr Lloyd George, regretted that part of the prime minister's speech had not contributed to the removal of the difficulties of maintaining peace, for instance made an "uncalled for attack upon the de facto government of Russia."

Mr. Asquith said that in the event of the negotiations between the Poles and the Bolsheviks breaking down, the question should be referred to an absolutely impartial representative tribunal and he asked why the League of Nations should not be brought in.

The House, Mr. Asquith asserted, should have an opportunity, before Great Britain took any warlike steps, of reviewing the whole situation, and he pointed out that after the adjournment of the House, there was no power to recall Parliament at short notice.

Mr. J. R. Clynes (labor) emphasised that the prime minister's attack upon the form of government in Russia could not possibly improve relations, especially between individuals having to conduct negotiations.

RESPECT INDEPENDENCE

Mr. Clynes, nevertheless, pointed out that the labor party must not be taken as approving all or most of the methods or principles of the Soviet government. He recognised that an independent Polish nation was essential to the peace of the world but, as every Russian pronouncement had clearly indicated, that they intended to respect Poland's independence the British Government had no right to the contrary assumption.

Mr. Clynes contended that the League of Nations should have intervened in the early days of hostilities. Moreover, if it were wrong to intervene diplomatically when Poland seemed to be getting the best of the fight, it was much more wrong to propose intervention by force of arms when Poland was losing.

Mr. Lloyd George said that immediately on receipt of a telegram, giving the Soviet's terms of armistice after consultation with his colleagues, he had communicated the terms to Poland, France and Italy.

The Russian government had insisted on direct negotiations with the Polish government.

They were entitled to direct negotiations and having taken that course, he was of opinion that it would not be fair, when the delegates of both sides were meeting forthwith, to express an opinion which might embarrass the discussions. There were certain things which he did not know the meaning of and the Polish delegates would certainly ask for an explanation.

They had given their preliminary impression to the Polish government; beyond that he did not think it would be fair to go. He agreed that the terms created a new situation.

Replying to the suggestion that the house should not adjourn until the matter had been finally settled, Mr. Lloyd George said he was hopeful that such a step would be unnecessary.

CASEMENT SAW NOOSE WAITING, BUT WAS IN NET

Germans Held Pistol To His Head, He Told Princess

SAW MISTAKE TOO LATE

Wished To Kill Himself, But Was Dissuaded By British Woman

London, July 3.—A story reminiscent of the old elocutionary "piece" on the death of Benedict Arnold revealed in an account just published of the last hours in Germany of Roger Casement, the Irishman executed for promoting the Easter rebellion in 1916.

The story forms one of the most striking passages in the book "An English Wife in Berlin," by Princess Blucher, daughter of an old Lancashire family, who married the then Count Blucher in 1907 and was forced to leave England and go to Berlin with him and other members of the German Embassy staff in 1914.

She knew Casement throughout his sojourn in Germany. She tells how at first both she and her husband endeavored to dissuade Casement from attempting his exploit, but the latter not only persisted but made himself obnoxious by the manner in which he aired his opinions. Later Princess Blucher describes Casement's disillusionment.

"The poor man came into the room like one demented and rushed around examining all the doors. For a moment I was frightened, thinking that I had to do with a maniac, and moved toward the telephone.

"Then he began: 'You were right last year when you told me I had put my head into the noose by coming here. I tried not to admit you were right. I didn't like to tell you when you kept urging me to get out of the country that I realised from the moment I landed here what a terrific mistake I had made. Also, I didn't want to tell the reality, that I was a prisoner here. I couldn't get away. They won't let me leave the country.

"The German Foreign Office has me shadowed, believing I am a British spy, and England has had men spying upon me at all times as well. Now the German Admiralty has asked me to go on an errand which all my being revolts against and I am going mad at the thought of it for it will make me appear a traitor to the Irish cause."

"At these words he sat down and sobbed like a child."

The Princess tried to get more facts from him in order to try to suggest an exit from the situation, but Casement refused, saying that if he told more lives would be imperilled; if he were silent only his own would be forfeit. Casement said, according to the Princess:

"They are holding a pistol to my head here and they have the hangman's noose ready for me in England, so the only thing for me to do is to go out and kill myself.' I dissuaded him from this, and he finally left leaving a packet of letters for delivery after his death.

"'Tell them I was loyal to Ireland, although it won't appear so,' he said."

R. R. Employes To Be Given Increase

Ministry Grants Additional Salary After Great Deal Of Discussion

Through the efforts of Mr. C. P. Yin, managing director, employes of the Shanghai-Nanking Railway will be given an increase in salary as from July 1. Mr. Yin went up to Peking recently and held a lengthy conference with officers of the Ministry of Communications on the subject. The matter was decided upon only after considerable discussion among the experts of the administration.

The final decision was to grant the advance on the following scale: 20 percent increase for those receiving less than $50 a month; 15 percent for those whose pay is between $50 and $100; and ten percent for those who earn between $100 and $150. No increase will be given to workers, who receive $150 or more.

New employes will start work at the new rates instead of the old. The revised wage scale is deemed effective from July 1, and those received their usual salary in July are to be given a bonus equal to the increase.

Future Of France Depends On Fish

Government Credit Voted To Develop Fishing Ports Of Nation

Paris, July 3.—England's victories of the past may have been won on the roast beef of old England, but France's future depends on a fish diet, if the energies of the Fishing Director of the Ministry of Merchant Marine can be taken as a criterion.

The Government apparently supports the view of scientists that fish is an excellent builder of brawn and muscle, and has voted a credit for this year's development of fishing ports and the replacement of small vessels lost during the war. The principal ports to be remodelled immediately are Boulogne, La Rochelle, Lorient and Port de Bouc on the Mediterranean, and experts are confident that the cost of fish will decrease until whole families may be fed for less than the cost now of a small sized beefsteak or horse entlet.

NEW CHANCES FOR DEVELOPMENT IN JUNGLE LAND

Consul Tells Of Latest Opportunities In Penang, British Malaya

PLANTS FOR COAST

Tin And Rubber Can Be Handled At Advantage At San Francisco

San Francisco, June 26.—George L. Logan, United States consul, who is making his headquarters at the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce during part of his leave from his duties at Penang, British Malaya, declares that railroad building along the peninsula will soon open up vast new tracts of jungle for planting to rubber, African oil palms, cocoanuts and other tropical trees.

"The Malay Peninsula, which looks very small on our school maps," said Logan, "is the world's chief source of supply for rubber, and tin, and a large producer of copra, tapioca, patchouli, gums and spices. The most important ports of the peninsula are Singapore and Penang, where American consulates are located, but Kuala Lumpur and Ipoh are important and up-to-date commercial cities. British and Chinese commercial interests predominate, although there has been a considerable increase in American investments and enterprise. There are approximately fifty American business houses in Singapore.

OPPORTUNITY FOR COAST

"A large part of the tin and rubber exported to the United States is entered at San Francisco and other Pacific ports for shipment East, which suggests the thought that manufacturers requiring such raw products ought to find the Pacific coast a suitable location for their plants.

"There are today between two and three million acres in Malaysia planted to rubber and there will be a considerable increase in acreage during the current year. A market has developed for tractors and improved agricultural machinery suitable for such estates.

"A great deal of interest is being taken in the African oil palm, which thrives well in that soil and climate, and the British Government is encouraging its development. Another new industry giving promise of great success is the production of rubber seed oil, used in the paint and soap trades.

BIG FOOD SALES

"American food products have a large sale there and are generally favored.

"There are over 3,000 miles of first-class highway and a strong demand for American motor cars and accessories. The agent for a certain car told me he was over 2,000 cars behind on his orders.

"Singapore is now connected by rail with Bangkok via Penang and plans are being carried out for extending the railway line to Saigon on the East and to Rangoon on the West, which would open up immense tracts of virgin jungle land.

"The number of cargo-carrying vessels flying the American flag has greatly increased in those waters and they are welcome visitors. One frequently hears the complaint that they are not being operated on a sufficiently regular schedule, but more on a "tramp" basis so that shippers do not always have ample time in which to assemble their shipments which may be miles from port and scattered on several estates when notice of the immediate arrival of a vessel is received.

"Were I competent to do so, it would not be appropriate for me to discuss questions of political policy, especially at this time, but as Americans we are all interested in:

"Expanding our legitimate trade, industry and interests, not to the detriment or exclusion of others but to our joint benefit;

"Developing more efficient means of communication and transportation and especially our merchant marine;

"Securing consideration of our rights and interests, not aggressively like a man with a chip on his shoulder, nor in the 'we won the war' spirit, but in mutual helpfulness and understanding;

"Promoting more cordial relations with our friends and neighbors of other nationalities and a better understanding on both sides;

"Seeing that in our political and commercial relations we give and receive a square deal in every meaning of that phrase;

"Thinking out and applying right solutions of those important and complex problems that are engaging the attention of our political, commercial, educational and religious leaders, and giving at home and abroad the right interpretation of American ideals, thought and policies."

British Riflemen To Meet U.S. Team

Cable Match On Ranges Will Be Conducted In Connection With National Meet

New York, July 10.—One of the events to be held in conjunction with the national rifle shooting tournament, to be held under the auspices of the Government at Camp Perry, Ohio, next month, will be the international match with the pick of the small bore rifle teams of England, Canada and Australia opposing the marksmen of the United States. This match will be shot by cable. The teams will do their shooting on their home ranges, the scores will be exchanged by cable and later the targets will be exchanged. The event will be for the $1,000 Dewer Trophy. This prize is now held by this country and a team of twenty picked men will shoot in its defense.

Fired first about 1909, the British team defeated the American small bore team for the cup, using the indoor range and 25 yard distance. The Americans took it back the next year, lost it in 1912, then re-took it in 1913 and kept it in 1914. Last year at the Caldwell National Matches of the Government, the American team shot against the British team over the outdoor ranges for the first time, teams of twenty men, distance 50 and 100 yards, 20 shots at each range.

The American team won by 94 points. Camp Perry will see another attempt of the British to take the trophy home, whence it originally came, the match scheduled for August 21.

An additional feature of the national rifle matches will be the small-bore tournament, which will be held on a completely equipped range at 50 and 100 yards.

There will be special events at 200 yards, with cash entries and cash prizes, and a most generous list of special prizes, such as rifles, telescopes and ammunition, for the shooter who has not won a first, second or third in any of the big matches.

These small-bore matches are open for the shooters of the little .22 rifle, who are forming clubs all over the country to engage in this attractive sport. The little power, the high accuracy and small amount of noise of the .22 rifle are making the small-bore game more popular than the service rifle shooting in America, as it is in England, because the devotees can find a place 100 yards long almost anywhere, while firing the noisy and powerful service rifle requires a lot of room and usually a long trip to the range.

The Perry matches of this year will be marked by the great number of pistol events, in which any old pistol from the .32 for police teams; to the .38 or larger for the other events, may be used.

Last year, in which any pistol or revolver of .38 or larger calibre, could be used, the service .45 Colt automatic in the hands of A. P. Lane, won the National Rifle Association pistol match with the record-breaking score of 293 out of a possible 300 points. In the hands of another shot, the same sort of pistol won the National Pistol Match, defeating the various sorts of target revolvers allowed in the N. R. A. match, and the various .45 calibre revolvers used in the National Pistol Match.

SEEKS AMERICAN AID TO RID EAST OF PRUSSIANISM

The Shanghai Ten Men's Union, 232-3 Rue Brenier de Montmorend, which came into existence during the anti-Japanese boycott movement last year, has addressed a lengthy memorandum to the United States Congressional Party, soliciting American help in ridding China of Japanese aggression.

The message said in part as follows:

"Until only recently, we had entrusted our country to those who were either officials or so called politicians. Nobody cared for the national affair or to ask a single question. The people had trusted and relied upon them; but they abused their powers and neglected their duties. They were unable to suppress the internal unrests or to resist the outside intrusions. Now every warm-blooded citizen is aroused and contrives individually or unitedly to save his own country from absolute ruins. Hence the formation of our union. The unit membership consists of ten men, of whom one represents that particular unit; hence the name of our union.

OBJECTS OUTLINED

"Our three chief objects are: (1) Boycotting Japanese goods, (2) Developing industry and (3) Encouraging education. Five thousand of us are daily carrying out the above very faithfully.

"Besides boycotting, a brush factory has been established; and also a day and an evening school and a boxing school have been started. These schools are only for the poor and being supported by voluntary subscription from our members, they charge no fees. This is our first step, and extension is expected in the near future.

"Such are the activities of our union, and there are similar activities in thousands of other unions and societies all over our country. Therefore we hope to bring our country on sound footings again at the end of the next decade or so. This is an example of what we endeavor to do; to educate and to instruct others and to awaken the ignorants. But the Huns of the East are still trying to prevent our progress. Mere bully! And to resist such bullies we must rely upon American help.

WHEN U. S. ENTERED WAR

"At the time when you Americans joined the great World War, you declared that you were not fighting the Germans, but Prussianism, and for the Peace of the World, now the motto "Might is Right" is dead with the fall of the German Empire. But Prussianism still exists with Japan. Its effect is really fatal directly to the Peace of the Far East, and indirectly to the Peace of the World. If such Japanese policies were to win the day, then the fall of Germany comes to nothing, as far as Prussianism is concerned.

"Therefore with the world's peace in view, we cannot help to look forward for you Americans to carry out your first intention so that there may be no chance whatever for Prussianism to spread in the Far East. Then we can pay our whole attention to education and to the development of our natural resources. And in the near future the 400,000,000 of us Chinese will follow the footsteps of the Americans to fight whatever brutal policies of any other nations. If so, not only Prussianism may be uprooted forever in the East and West, but also the Goddess of Peace may enjoy ever-lasting glory."

Parting Students To Be Honored By Local Y.M.C.A.

Chu, Vice-president, and sub-manager of the Shanghai Commercial Savings Bank, will preside. Vocal music will be furnished by the association quartet under the direction of Mr. C. D. Glauque.

Curiosities Of The Dictionary

Did you know that one of the most interesting books to read is the dictionary? I am not joking. Some time when time hangs heavy take down the big unabridged, lay it on the table and ramble through its leaves.

For you will find in words more surprise and romance and history than in the latest "best seller." It is not to be wondered at that some men can devote their lives to philology, and that this study can grow into as absorbing a madness as chess or the collecting of antiques or the solving of riddles.

Let us ramble leisurely through the pages of the big dictionary and see what strange things we can find. Here is the word "generous," and we find it originally meant "well born." "Geranium" is a Greek word, signifying "crane," and the flowering plant gets its name from the resemblance of its seed pod to a crane's bill.

Gas is taken from the German word "geist," meaning a ghost or spirit, just as "spirit" at first meant breath.

Among the F's I read the curious fact that "forestall" was originally to waylay a dealer and buy his goods before he reached his stall in the market; that "fond" is from "fon," an idiot, as used by Spencer, and once meant weak, silly and foolish, and that "florin" was so-called because this coin came from Florence.

This latter word suggests looking up some other terms derived from Italian cities, and we find that "pistol" comes from Pistoia, a "leghorn" hat is named from the city of Leghorn, and we have "mantuamakers" from Mantua.

How do we get our meaning of failure into the Italian word "fiasco," which means simply a bottle or flask? The process is curious. Venice is noted for its glass workers, who for centuries have made all sorts of delicate things out of this substance. It used to be their custom when they spoiled a fine piece of work to make a bottle out of it; hence the term "fiasco," signifying that what one is doing is useless.

Let us give the leaves a flop for fear this should look like study. We land over in the H's. The word "husband" strikes our eye. He is the "house bond," the one who holds the household together. Let us look for the names of the other members of the family. There is history and poetry in each one.

"Wife" is she who "weaves" for the house; "son" is the "cleaner," "daughter" is the "milker," and "spinster" is an unmarried woman such as the husband's or wife's sister, who 'spins." We can see the primitive English family all at work.

We glance along and come to the word "humble," and there is the phrase "humble pie." We've always wondered how such a saying arose; and now that we find it we find a bit of picturesque old times. For the word is properly "umble pie." The "umbles" of a deer correspond to the giblets of a goose. When the big venison pastries were made for the lord and lady and guests, pies made of the scraps and "umbles" were baked for the inferior folk, those who sat "below for salt," or at the foot of the table.

Over on another page we strike a word whose origin is about as curious as any in the language, "pocket handkerchief." The French "couvre chef" meant head covering, and from it comes our word "kerchief." By prefixing "hand" we get "handkerchief," as the head covering was carried in the hand. Then "pocket" was added to signify it was carried in the pocket, and now the "head covering to be held in the hand and carried in the pocket" is not used for covering the head at all.

"Q" has always struck children learning their alphabet as a funny letter. It is derived, some say, from the French "queue," a tail, its form being that of the letter O with a tail.

"Quandary" is a word with an odd history. It is from the French, "Qu'en diraije?" meaning "What shall I say of it?" and hence has come to signify puzzle or perplexity.

A great many other diverting and interesting things can be found in the big book, to which we usually go only in cases of doubt, to find the meaning of a strange word or the spelling of a familiar one. For lovers of rare and out of the way bits of information no volume can compare with it.

It is related of a certain German savant, to show how strong the ruling passion is in death, that as he was dying he exclaimed in French in which language he was deeply learned, "Je meurs" (I die). Pretty soon he opened his eyes before passing away and added: "Man kann auch sagen, Je me meurs!" (one can also in French use the reflexive form of the verb "to die.") His last flicker of interest was in the word more than in the fact of death.

Old Dr. Johnson, the great dictionary maker, said: "I am not so lost in lexicography as to forget that words are the daughters of earth, while things are the sons of heaven." But these "daughters of earth" are captivating nevertheless, and no one loved them more than the old doctor.

HOW MUCH IS YOUR BABY WORTH?

You will surely reply, "He is worth to me, more than all the money in the world!" Such being the case you will be glad to know of a medicine which will help your baby's teething, enable him to sleep soundly, digest well and develop into a sturdy, healthy child. The name of this already well-known Canadian children's remedy is Baby's Own Tablets. Here is one endorsement out of many received. It comes from an American mother, Mrs. W. M. Stoddart, of East Brookfield, Vt. U.S.A., who writes:—"I have never found anything as good as Baby's Own Tablets for regulating the bowels of little children. My baby was sick and restless while cutting his teeth but the Tablets quickly made him all right."

Baby's Own Tablets are equally helpful and harmless to the youngest infant as to the child of 6 years old or more. They are confidently recommended as a remedy for simple fever, indigestion, constipation, colic, diarrhoea, croup, eczema, also to expel worms. Shopkeeper Charged With Arson Gets 2 Years' Jail Term

A shopkeeper at 862 Chekiang Road was sentenced yesterday in the Mixed Court to two years' imprisonment on a charge of arson. A constable on duty testified that an explosion took place in the shop at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday morning and three distinct fires were seen by him on the premises.

Evidence adduced from Detective Sergeant Gabbutt and Chief Officer Pett showed that kerosene was discovered and the lives of six people were endangered by the explosion. Mr. Pett further identified the accused as one who owned a shop in Pootung, which was burnt down some time ago.

BIG 1920 BOUT OFF; DEMPSEY AND CARPENTIER CANNOT FIGHT UNTIL AFTER MINOR RING TILT

Managers And Promoters In Futile Discussion To Stage Battle This Year As Frenchman Must Box Battling Levisky

New York, August 5.—The last lingering hope that Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world, might defend his title against Georges Carpentier before the end of the year went up in a tiny puff of smoke yesterday afternoon, when the first meeting of the managers and promoters connected with the proposed bout was held at the Hotel Belmont. After more than an hour of earnest but futile discussion the conclave ended exactly where it began, the only definite fact which emerged from the verbal battle being that the championship bout will not be held during 1920 unless one of a dozen very unlikely occurrences takes place.

The rock on which the plans of the managers and promoters came to grief was that of contracts, the sancity of which formed the basis of more than one speech during the progress of the meeting. First of the obstructions was the agreement between Francois Descamps, Carpentier's manager, and Charles B. Cochran, the English promoter, which links the French fighter to Cochran until Jan. 1, 1921. The second of the contracts to bar the path was that for the ring battle between Carpentier and Battling Levinsky, the promoter of which is Jack Curley, the manager of Carpentier's recent tour.

The meeting was held in the suite of Jack Kearns, the manager of Dempsey, and it was an open affair. Those present, in addition to newspaper men, moving picture photographers and followers of both sides, were: Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager; Georges Carpentier and his manager, Francois Descamps; Jack Curley, promoter of Carpentier's tour; Tex Rickard, who promoted the Willard-Dempsey bout, and William A. Brady, the theatrical producer, who acted in the dual capacity of chairman of the meeting and representative of Charles B. Cochran.

A FIRST MEETING

The occasion was the first time since Carpentier came to this country that the rival managers had met across a table and discussed terms. Heretofore, their negotiations had been conducted at the ends of a telegraph wire, with as little success as attended yesterday's conclave. Whatever plans either party was entertaining were effectively blocked by the contracts already entered into by Carpentier and Descamps.

The only developments of the meeting were these: Carpenter' next bout will be on Oct. 10 in this country with Battling Levinsky, light-heavyweight champion; Dempsey's next encounter will be with Bill Breman and it will be followed by bouts with several others of the heavyweight field, notably with Fred Fulton, if the latter wins his clash with Harry Wills in this city on July 15; Dempsey will not fight Carpentier in any other country but the United States and he will sign no articles until after the Levinsky bout; Carpentier is prevented by this contract for the latter clash from taking Dempsey on this year, even if Charles B. Cochran could be persuaded to release the French idol from the contract that now binds him until Jan. 1, 1921.

It was evident at the meeting that the Levinsky contract is the greatest stumbling block in the path of both Dempsey and Carpentier. William A. Brady, who represents Cochran in the United States, was told definitely by Kearns that Dempsey would never meet the Frenchman in a European ring, thus making Cochran's contract worth nothing. But even if the English promoter would abrogate the agreement under these circumstances, the contract for the Levinsky bout would still block the way. Jack Curley, who is promoting the battle, rejected Kearn's suggestion that the bout be postponed and refused even to approach Dan Morgan, Levinsky's manager with the suggestion. Kearns offered to pay both Curley and Morgan a substantial forfeit if they would postpone the bout, but to no avail.

KEARNS DECLINES TO MOVE

Without this assurance from Curley, Kearns refused to move another step toward the championship bout. He made no attempt to conceal his opinion about the state of affairs, which is that, after the Levinsky bout, it may be Levinsky, and not Carpentier that Dempsey would have to meet. Dempsey's manager refused to sign any articles in advance of a bout that "may make Carpentier worth $100 after it is all over."

The case of Carpentier was stated by Descamps, through Jack Curley as interpreter, and it rested solely on the contracts to which the French manager has affixed his signature. He contended that his action in signing the Levinsky contract was justified in view of the uncertainty surrounding Dempsey and the latter's recent trial, which at that time threatened to drag on for several months. Furthermore, the Cochran contract forbids the Frenchman from even discussing with another promoter terms for a bout with Dempsey. Descamps told Kearns that Carpentier is willing to fight Dempsey in London or Paris within four or six weeks after the Levinsky bout on Oct. 10, but the champion's manager spurned the challenge.

Carpentier's plans call for a departure on the liner La Tourraine tomorrow. The French idol will remain abroad until Sept. 6, when he will take steamer for this country to prepare for the clash with Levinsky. Following this he will again return to France, where he will stay until it is time to return to the United States again for the Dempsey bout, which now seems certain to be held some time in 1921.

Charley Harvey, American representative for Ted Lewis, who is now fighting abroad, issued a challenge to Carpentier after the meeting to meet Lewis either in this country or in Europe. Harvey declared his willingness to make a side bet of $50,000, but Descamps took refuge behind his Cochran's contract and refused to listen to Harvey's challenge. This latter also made an offer on behalf of Joe Beckett, the English heavyweight, whom Carpentier knocked out in London last Fall, but was likewise unsuccessful in this challenge.

The positive announcement was made after the meeting by Kearns that Dempsey would meet Bill Brennan in his first bout since the bout at Toledo in which the former won his title from Willard. No date or place has been selected. Kearns said, but the bout will go to the highest bidder. Kearns indicated that the champion will be active in the ring between now and the time when he finally faces Carpentier.

FAMOUS PITCHER ILL

"Christy" Mathewson, Once the Greatest, Has Tuberculosis

(Kokusai Associated Press)

Sarance Lake, New York, July 31.—"Christy" Mathewson is seriously ill with tuberculosis.

"Big Six" Mathewson, for a decade acclaimed as the greatest pitcher in baseball, for fifteen years was one of the biggest factors in keeping the New York Giants running one, two, three in the National League race year after year. No player in professional baseball has ever earned greater esteem from the public and from his colleagues than "Christy" Mathewson.

Early in July it was announced that Mathewson had decided to give up his position as coach of the Giants and retire from the game. Mathewson, who has been with the Giants since 1901, except for a year as manager of the Cincinnati Nationals, and another in France on military duty, had been suffering for a fortnight from bronchitis, and at that time planned to go to Lake Placid, in the Adirondacks, for a vacation.

"Matty" aided the New York club in winning the National League pennant in 1904, 1905, 1911, 1912 and 1913 and the world's series in 1905. He retired from active service in 1916.

Babe Ruth Feels High Cost Of Hats

Waterbury, Conn., July 18.—One of the reasons Babe Ruth wanted part of his purchase money when sold to the Yankees was explained here today when his wife bought twenty-five hats valued at $840 in a millinery shop.

She paid the bill with a check signed by Babe.

"She sure knocked Babe's roll for a home run," remarked a baseball fan, who saw the check on exhibition in the window.

JEM MACE FIRST OFFICIAL CHAMP OF BOXING WORLD

Beat Tom Allen In Ten Rounds In Battle Staged On May 10, 1870

Soon after Mace failed to meet him, Coburn retired and the American title was bandied about among a number of boxers. It was the custom under London rules for a champion to defend title every six months or forfeit to a bona fide challenger. The result was that the championship was passed back and forth like a tennis ball. Several men laid claim to title who had no right to it, but Tom Allen, an Englishman who had settled in America, finally made good his claims, and on May 10, 1870, at Kennerville, La., the first battle for the world's title ever staged on American soil was fought. The contestants were Tom Allen, champion of America, and Jem Mace, champion of England. Mace won in ten rounds and thus became officially the first world's champion in the history of pugilism. Unofficially Heenan was the first and Coburn the second.

GOSS DEFEATS ALLEN

After his defeat by Mace for the world's title Allen solidified his hold on the American championship by defeating Mike McCoole and Ben Hogan. Allen finally lost the American title to Joe Goss, another Englishman who had made America his home. Goss won on a foul in the twenty-third round of a battle in Boone county, Kentucky, September 7, 1876.

The tracing of the American title from Goss to Ryan, to Sullivan, to Corbett and to Fitzsimmons is easily accomplished, and it remained for Jeffries to establish the world's championship in America by first defeating Peter Jackson, the heavyweight champion of Europe and Australia, and then knocking out Bob Fitzsimmons, the holder of the American title.

With the retirement of Jeffries the world's title lapsed but was again establish when Tommy Burns, after gaining the American championship, won the world's honors by knocking out Bill Squires, champion of Australia, and Gunner Moir, champion of England.

Since then the world's championship has descended from Burns to Johnson, to Willard, to Dempsey.

SULLIVAN'S STATICS

The claim made in behalf of Sullivan as a world's champion continues alive, as is evident from the following communication recently received by the writer from James Garvice of Toronto: "For the benefit of a number of your Canadian friends will you kindly state whether or not John L. Sullivan ever was heavyweight champion of the world? I notice of late a number of claims of the premier title for the Boston Strong Boy, but no matter how hard I study the records I can find no authority to substantiate this claim.

"From a late record book I make Jim Jeffries the first American to hold the title of heavyweight champion of the world. I look for you to solve this exasperating problem for me."

As Sullivan's title descended from Allen, to Goss, to Ryan, and as the only one of them to box for a world's title was Allen, who lost to Mace, it is evident that Sullivan won no world's championship by descent.

NEVER MET JACKSON

Therefore, if Sullivan was a world's champion he must have won it in the ring. The record shows that Sullivan never met Peter Jackson, heavyweight champion of Europe and Australia, nor Jem Smith, champion of England. Only by defeating those men could Sullivan have become champion of the world. Possibly Sullivan could have defeated both of them, but the fact that he did not conquer them is proof positive that Sullivan never had but one title, that of champion of America. Sullivan's only international battle, that Mitchell, resulted in a draw.

Lawn Bowls

(By "Skip").

The semi-final rounds of the Open Singles created no small amount of interest and quite a crowd turned up at Hongkew Park last Monday to see G. Dunlop beat G. Bloom. It was a great game as the score indicates 21-19 and the result was in doubt until the last wood had been trundled. G. Manwaring had quite an easy thing on Tuesday when he defeated S. Marks by 21-4. The two finalists G. Dunlop and G. Manwaring meet on Saturday, August 21 at Hongkew Park. Mr. F. Ferrier has been appointed referee for the final.

BUCKMASTER IS WINNER OF CUP IN POLO MATCH

Tenth Time Victor Has Been Honored By Queen At Meet

London, July 3.—Seldom has England seen a greater week in sport. The Hurlingham Polo tournament concluded with Queen Mary presenting a trophy to the Old Cantabs, captained by W. S. Buckmaster, called England's "greatest player," who received the cup from the Queen for no less than the tenth time in the twenty-five years he has played.

DEAL DISAPPOINTING

The American professionals at Deal proved even a deeper disappointment than the amateurs, and the British veterans plunged through their ranks unperturbed. In polo America has been represented by an army team that admitted itself to be a scratch organisation from the army in the field, but which nevertheless walked off with the novice cup at Ranelagh.

At Wimbledon, however, each time that a critical point in the great tournament arrived it was an American or Americans who fought it out right up to the moment yesterday when Tilden fought the epic battle with Patterson for the world crown on the grass courts. Only the American women were a disappointment. Mrs. Mallory and Miss Ryan dropped off early and permitted Suzanne Lenglen to outclass Mrs. Lambert Chambers in the final test. It was to Wimbledon this year, too, that fashion turned.

SOCIETY IS RETRENCHING

When Ascot's race meet is over society is usually supposed to go houseboating at Henley, but the absence of gorgeous, flower decked, illuminated craft along the shores was the most notable feature of the regatta.

There were more punts, canoes and small craft than ever, but the hosts who formerly were lavish entertainers on houseboats generally were contributing their incomes to Austen Chamberlain's war taxes, and though many Thames valley country houses entertained parties this week elaborate hospitalities were so constricted as to lead to serious doubts whether the yachting season at Cowes, in August, will amount to more than the ghost of former years, despite the fact that it is announced that the Britannia is entered and the royal family will be present through regatta week.

Tientsin Cricketers Coming In September

The members of the Tientsin Cricket team that will come to Shanghai in the first week in September have not yet been announced, Shanghai's match with the Hongkong team is being arranged to take place about November 8. No further news has been received regarding the proposed visit of the team from Hankow, but it is still thought that this match will be arranged.

REGULARS WIN IN FASTEST GAME BASEBALL FANS HAVE BEEN GIVEN ON LOCAL GROUNDS THIS SEASON

Two Home Runs And Lack Of Errors Features Of Contest; Doc Downs' Team Takes Lead In Series, Three Games To Two

By Viola Verclaire

The Regulars hopped onto the offerings of the Bolsheviks pitchers the first inning of yesterday's game and never let up for a moment all through the contest.

Merrill who started pitching for the "Bolshies" was rapped for three runs in the initial inning and three more were gathered off Claire during the matinee.

By winning this game the Regulars go into the lead, having won three games to the Bolsheviks two, and it begins to look as if they were going to 'cop' the pennant for this Intercity series.

IN GREAT FORM

Both of these teams are fielding and hitting in great form, and there should be one grand little ball team chosen out of the ranks to oppose the Tientsin team on August 21.

The Tientsin boys will arrive in Shanghai on Thursday evening, August 19, but will rest all day Friday, and on Saturday the big series will open with a double header, Tientsin to play the Shanghai and the Japanese teams.

The schedule for the games of the series is as follows—Saturday, August 21 two games, Sunday, August 22 one game, Tuesday, August 24 one game, Wednesday, August 25 one game, Thursday, August 26 one game, Saturday, August 28 two games and Sunday, August 29 one game.

URGES U.S. TO TAKE HOLD OF TURKEY

Exporter In Near East For 13 Months Sees Danger Of Chaos Otherwise

New York, July 7.—The Scandinavian-American liner United States arrived yesterday from Copenhagen with 450 passengers, for the first time in five months, having been detained in her home port by the harbor workers' strike. One of the passengers in the first cabin was Fritz Melchior, an exporter, of 72 Fifth Avenue, who spent thirteen months in the Near East and who expressed the opinion the United States should take a mandate for Turkey, instead of Armenia, because the Turks were "real gentlemen."

"When I left Batum, 10,000 British troops were being withdrawn to fight elsewhere and the city was being abandoned to its fate, with the Georgians and Bolshevists waiting at the gates to come in and start looting. The Greeks cannot do anything, as their time will be fully occupied in fighting the guerrilla bands in the country outside Symrna. Unless America takes a hand, a state of chaos in the Near East will be the result. Bolshevism is making headway in Turkey, especially in the capital."

Mr. Melchior, who was in Copenhagen while the strike was on, said it was killed by bankers, lawyers, merchants and others joining together and working to load the ships.

Another passenger was Count Nicholas de Scrouve, a friend of the late Tsar of Russia and of the Russian pianist Rachmaninoff, who motored from Los Angeles to meet the Count at the pier in Hoboken last night. He said he had lost an estate of 7,000 acres and a castle near Moscow in the revolution and was coming to this country to make a fresh start in life.

The liner is commanded by Captain L. F. Peronard, formerly of the motor ship California, who succeeded Captain Gotsche when the latter recently was promoted to the Frederik VIII.

The Norwegian-American liner Bergensfjord arrived yesterday from Bergen with 536 passengers and a story of a fire which broke out in the engine room when the vessel was 150 miles out from this port on her last eastbound voyage to Norway. The engineers were trapped in one of the stoke holes for an hour and a half while the crew extinguished the flames. The 1,260 passengers remained on deck in the rain while the fire was being fought below. No one was injured and the only damage was in the engine room.

Among those on the Bergensfjord yesterday were Ferdinand and Gustav Lunde, Norwegian film promoters, on their way to join the explorer, Amundsen, at Nome, Alaska, who, they said, will set out in August or September to make another attempt to reach the Pole. They have instruments with them for him to replace those he lost on the previous expedition.

Venice Crowds See Titian In Old Place

'Assumption Of Virgin' Restored To Historic Church Of The Frari

Rome, July 3.—Despatches from Venice say that large numbers of people crowd the church of the Frari every day to see Titian's "Assumption of the Virgin," which was recently restored to its original place in the choir of this magnificent Gothic structure, for which Titian painted it in 1516.

For some time this marvellous creation of Titian's, which is considered one of the seven great masterpieces in the world, was in the Venetian Academy of Fine Arts. During the war it had been removed, together with the other priceless works of art in Venice, to a place of safety. Now that it has been put back in the beautiful frame of carved marble built around it centuries ago the Venetian people, who take immeasurable pride in it, go to see it, as they would call on a beloved friend just returned from a long journey.

FOUR NEW AIR MAIL LINES ARE PLANNED FOR U.S.

Washington, July 8.—The Post Office Department today issued a call for proposals for the operation of four new airplane mail routes under contract as a supplement to the transcontinental air mail service between New York and San Francisco, which will be operated by the department itself.

One of the new routes will be a branch line from Cleveland to Detroit. Another will carry the mail from New York to Chicago, via Pittsburg, while a third will operate between Pittsburgh and St. Louis, and the fourth route will be from New York City to Atlanta. These lines and the transcontinental mail route will link New York City with the Pacific Coast, the Great Lakes, the industrial centers of Pennsylvania, the heart of the Middle West and the South. Operation of the five routes will make New York City the greatest air mail center in the world.

The only one of the five routes to be operated by the Government will be the transcontinental route from New York City, via Cleveland, Chicago and Omaha to San Francisco. Congress has made available an appropriation of a little more than $1,000,000 for this new route. The other four routes to be operated by contract will be the first established by the Government. In making the specification to be complied with by the bidders of these contract routes the Post Office Department has been guided by its own experience in the operation of air mail service during the last two years. The requirements are such as will admit of the employment of any modern type of airplane. Any modern airplane can easily perform the service.

The bids are to be opened on September 10, for the term of one year from November 15. The proposed routes follow:

Route No. 631,001—From Cleveland, Ohio to Detroit, Mich., and back 306 times a year, carrying 1,000 pounds of mail a single trip each way. Air line distance approximately 95 miles.

Route No. 610,001—From Pittsburgh by Columbus, Cincinnati and Indianapolis to St. Louis, approximately 600 miles and back; by airplane; 306 times a year, carrying 1,500 pounds of mail a single trip each way.

Route No. 607,002—From New York, N. Y., via Harrisburg, Pa.; Pittsburgh, Pa., and Fort Wayne, Ind., to Chicago, Ill., approximately 735 miles, and back by airplane, 306 times a year, carrying 1,500 pounds of mail on a single trip each way.

Route No. 607,003—From New York, N. Y., via, Washington, D. C.; Raleigh, N. C., and Columbia, S. C., to Atlanta, Ga.; approximately 815 miles, and back, 306 times a year, carrying 1,500 pounds of mail on a single trip each way.

SPANISH SOCIALISTS SPLIT

One Wing For Bolshevist Theories, The Other Trade Union Methods

Madrid, July 5.—Division of the Socialist Party of Spain into an Extremist wing, favoring Bolshevist ideals, and a Moderate wing, following trade union methods, has become imminent following the recent congress held by the party.

The party was formerly under the control of workmen, led by Pablo Iglesias, whose activities were aimed to produce better working conditions. The recent illness of Iglesias, however, and the consequent weakening of his power, has brought control of the party into the hands of a group of politicians and intellectuals who have no direct connection with the workers.

The Socialists, in the course of the Congress of the Socialist General Union of Workers here, voted to retain membership in the International Federation of Labor.

NANKING ROAD

History's Heroes Follow Romances Of Flanders

The Great War Battlefields Of France And Belguim Had Already Been Peopled by The Hosts Of Dumas, Lytton And Sterne

The poplars still grow along the smooth roads from Paris to Calais. The blue Somme winds its way amid lush green banks toward Abbeville.

Gone are the phantoms which lately peopled the road—the endless line of dark green lorries, the pudding shapes of the tin hat, the ever present thudding of tramping feet—as though the world were full of men and they were all passing in turn—the monstrous cannon, every whit like the monsters of long ago, ready to branch off to the right, where more of their kind thundered endlessly.

Perhaps this was all a dream, a dark and bloody dream wherein legions went up never to return; a dream too vivid yet to be romance, too bloodstained yet to be pure gold. For but for this heavy dream this corner of France and Belgium, this theater of European history, unfolds a tale, a romance which those who look for battle fields should by no means miss.

What if the road were the base of supplies of nearly three armies? What if it sent up its men never to return? What if Chantilly was Joffre's headquarters and Beauvais forgot its tapestries and Amiens tried to protect its cathedral with sandbags against the shells of the boche, and St. Omar was once the British headquarters?

What matters it? Was it not also the scene of the famous ride of d'Artagnan to England to recover Anne of Austria's diamonds and save her honor? Was not Porthos hurt at Chantilly and Aramis fell out at Beauvais and Athos was left behind fighting the cardinal's minions at Amiens? Did not d'Artagnan take a sorely needed meal at St. Omar, while at Calais he fought the Comte de Wardes, got his ship and was fired at from the shore?

History never tells its own story. Always it is told by other histories, and these who look for battle fields today will find them best by the battle fields and romances of the past.

The eastern road from Paris, barred until the last year to all and sundry, has similar memories. Noisy-le-Sec trembled before the approaching armies. In 1870 the German guns taught it their horrible lesson. Meaux was within range of the great guns of midsummer, 1918; the bridge at Creil was blown up by the inhabitants, who were shot in consequence. Villers-Cotterets, Compeigne and a dozen others all were names written in letters of blood even a year ago.

But today from the palimpsest that is France the fainter writing slowly emerges from the heavy blottings of the great war. At Noisy, with conventional romance, Aramis courted Mme. de Longueville, whose golden hair and blue eyes were seen by d'Artagnan, concealed in a hedge, in a flood of moonlight. And courting survives war, was before it, goes on after it. The story of Aramis's courting persists even through a tragedy.

At Villers-Cotterets the stout Porthos established himself, rejoicing in his freedom from the rough and tumble of his musketeer life. But Porthos, for all his wine and his mutton and his jewelry, had a secret sorrow. He was not a baron and consequently he was looked down upon by the little nobility of Villers-Cotterets and Compeigne. Because of this secret sorrow he agreed to leave it all and follow d'Artagnan on more adventures, promised by the crafty Mazarin that some day he should be a baron.

The adventure led him through the Fonde rebellion and on to England and the luckless Charles to the imprisonment at Villers-Cotterets of that very Mazarin.

At Compeigne, too, young Raoul tried to push on to Noyon, one of the strong points of the 1918 drive. He wished to join Conde in fighting the Spaniards, whose line extended only from Island Hill of Cassel to Courtrai, and fugitives from which had only to go as far as Arras, another strong point, which held under the German blows.

Conde's victory at Lens, later the heart of the coal dirtrict, is celebrated in "Twenty Years After" as the greatest victory. Arras, Valenciennes, Bethune, ruined or half ruined today, were scenes of the immortal story. The palimpsest yields up the tale, hidden beneath the somber writing of the great war.

If history repeats itself it is because geography compels it. The Valley of the Meuse was predestined to be the scene of wars, adventure, romance. Whether in reality or in romance, these French and Flemish battles were no new thing. Crowded upon the mind by their recent memories, they still cannot wipe out the rivers and valleys and hills which turned this northeastern corner into the cockpit of Europe.

For all the ruins of today history can show endless ruins of yore. The surviving works of men's hands are but a fraction of what men's hands have done. Julius Caesar tells his tale as well as another. Church and state wrote the story, too. The novelist, the writer has played his part.

When Louis XI sent Quentin Durward to accompany the Princesses of Croye to the bishop of Liege's palace the Valley of the Meuse was the path of his pilgrimage just as it was that of the German armies. The boche did not invent the road from Liege to Namur and thence to Maubeuge, supposedly one of the stoutest fortresses of France.

Flanders—which we used to call France or Belgium—implies invasion. It is the high road of the tribes. It is one of the great romances of Europe.

At Namur, the junction of the Sambre and the Meuse, whither flowed "water as pure," in which the cardinal, lord archbishop of Rheims, liked to wash his hands after a copius banquet, young Quentin had to make the momentous decision of altering the route laid out for him by the perfidious Louis. To save the ladies of Croye from William de la Marc, "Wild Boar of the Ardennes," he took the left instead of the right bank of the river and brought his charges safely to the bishop, afterwards murdered by his own subjects.

THE TRADITIONS OF LIEGE

In the light of the picture in "Quentin Durward," the fighting powers of the Liegeois, remarked upon by Ludendorff, are not surprising.

"The people of Liege waxed fat and kicked," says the chronicler, and they defied their liege lord, the duke of Burgundy, who swore terrible upon them.

It was awkward for King Louis that, following the advice of his astrologer, he elected just that moment, when the Liegeois had killed their bishop, to visit Charles of Burgundy at Perrone. Perrone was wanted back by Louis almost as much as it was wanted back by the French in 1918. But Charles was not disposed to allow it to be redeemed. Louis had a narrow escape with his life when the news of the murdered bishop came to Charles. Perhaps he watched the little blue Somme from Earl Herbert's tower in which he was duly confined and cursed his own temerity for having thus adventured himself."

Perrone gave the French trouble enough in 1916 during the Somme campaign and, situated in flat country with endless moats and ditches and bulwarks, it was a strong fortress in the days of Charles the Bold. It was indeed never taken until the duke of Wellington took it in his advance on Paris in 1815, when it lost its title of Perrone La Pucelle. Liege suffered for its temerity, but, as is the way with romance, Quentin won his bride, and it is his bride who has come down to history above battle and kings and states and statesmen.

Similarly, it is "My Uncle Toby" who has come down to history as the patron saint of Namur. "My Uncle Toby" wound, received at Namur at the Bastion of St. Roch, under which he suffered four years, interested him very much in the topography of the place. So he got a map of Namur, and then he made out a map of the exact spot where he received his wound, and thence he went on to parabolas and the flight of shot which bored him in the end, by which time years had gone around, and, as "Tristram Shandy" relates, he told his physician decidedly that he was to hurry up his convalescence.

NAMUR IMMORTALISED

No doubt the siege of Namur in 1914 will have its place in the history books, but "My Uncle Toby" has his place in the book of the world and "Tristram Shandy" has immortalised Namur.

The grand romance concerns kings and kingdoms. Modern romance comes back to their peoples. The epic of Verdun is one of the great incidents of the war which detaches itself clearly, even at this early date. But Verdun, too, has memories other than those so recently in our minds.

At Valmy, near Verdun, Goethe saw and celebrated in a poem the first victory of the people against the kings. Like Russia today, the French revolution, with its regicide methods, caused outside interference and the duke of Brunswick led an army against Kellerman to put the upstart mob in its place. By good luck as much as by his own skill, Kellerman defeated the duke, who retreated bag and baggage by way of Verdun and the Argonne. Goethe was with the German army and realised the full significance of this people's victory.

NAPOLEON'S ATTEMPTS

Probably because of its fine beaches the coast from Ostend to Dunkirk inevitable suggested pleasuring on an extensive scale. Gambling, racing, sea bathing and North Sea air—those were the characteristics among others of Jean Bart, the privateer's, town of Dunkirk, also of Nieuport and La Panne. Everybody forgot that only a hundred years earlier they had been the scene of the Napoleonic attempts to invade England; that to this day there stands at Boulogne the great column raised to celebrate the event which never materialised. And everybody was surprised when exactly the same thing happened again and the coast towns of England were awaiting possible invasion, as they had waited a hundred years before.

This water-logged, pollard-willow country gradually expressed itself anew in terms of Ypres and Furnes and Poperhinge and Dixmude, and those towns in their turn became battered ruins, as they had become long ago. For the glory of Ypres had already departed, save for the cloth hall, through the ravages of war.

A HUNDRED YEARS LATER

Once more, a hundred years later, here were the privateers and the cannons and the flooding of the dykes. Here was the link with the past in the little fortified town of Bruges fortified centuries ago, but being fortified and having three canals must be shelled according to the rules.

ROCKEFELLER, 81, FINDS LIFE BRIGHT

'Enjoying Every Minute,' He Says At Lakewood, Celebrating Birthday

Lakewood, N. J., July 8.—John D. Rockefeller celebrated his eighty-first birthday here today. He declared he felt hale and hearty and was enjoying every minute of his life. He passed on some of this joy of living to the employes on his estate by distributing gifts, accompanying each with a handshake. Mr. Rockefeller's sister, Mrs. Davis, was present, while his children sent flowers and telegraphed their congratulations.

Mr. Rockefeller began the day with his usual round of golf, playing with Miss Martha Jamison, who motored over from Spring Lake, against the Rev. William C. Wedemeyer, pastor of the Lakewood Baptist Church, and Edwin J. Nelson, Superintendent of the Lakewood schools.

As he made his way over the two and a half miles of the nine-hole course, Mr. Rockefeller's enthusiasm was unflagging and his strokes vigorous. Miss Jamison and he won by a hole, the stroke scores being tied. The game was decided at the last hole.

Throughout the day Mr. Rockefeller was in high spirits. Beyond the statement that he was enjoying every day, he merely said he was glad to be celebrating his birth anniversary. His friends expressed satisfaction over his mental keenness and physical vigor. They said the last few years had seemed to pass over him with exceptional kindliness.

The celebration, the first held by Mr. Rockefeller at his Lakewood estate, closed with a dinner. Only a few old friends and relatives were present.

Kaiser Still Dreaming Of A Return To Power

Berlin, July 5.—Despite the reports that the ex-Kaiser is resigned to his fate and does not dream of returning to Germany The New York Times correspondent hears from a trustworthy source that he still cherishes hopes of a restoration. When he was visited recently by a man formerly connected with the German Navy he asked for a detailed report of the difficult situation created by the result of the elections.

William listened with almost breathless attention and finally exclaimed: "And they're not yet thinking of calling me back!" He then made several suggestions, in his characteristic, overbearing manner, of how he would handle the Spa conference. The imperial remark was reported freely among the small number of Germans who still believe in William's divine mission and who feel outraged that so little notice is taken of the commands of the "All-Highest." Most of the monarchists, however, are heartily sick of him and characterise his latest utterances as part of his heroic pose, believing that he has neither the will nor the courage to come to his country's aid. Even the reactionary Tagliche Rundschau recently pictured with brutal frankness the ex-Kaiser's weakness and deficiencies, calling him names that might make even Vorwarts turn green with envy. But of course the Tagliche Rundschau's candidate for the imperial throne is the ex-Crown Prince.

"PRICELESS"

is a popular way of describing anything which has proved to be of exceptional value, and may therefore be employed to describe that old and favourite preparation—Beecham's Pills. The ever-increasing army of men and women who have experience of this excellent medicine generally use some such phrase as "priceless" or "Worth a guinea a box" when speaking of Beecham's Pills. This is certainly high praise. But it is well-merited. Beecham's Pills have proved, times out of number, to be a "priceless" preparation in the treatment of digestive ailments. They bring relief; they safeguard the health; they effect remarkable cures. All who suffer in any way from biliousness, sick headache, constipation, impaired appetite, and the resulting loss of energy and want of tone should take

WHAT WE OWE TO BUTTONS

More Than 25,000,000,000 a Year Made in United States

The invention of a button has made it possible to adapt the flowing robes of our forefathers to suit the development of present-day requirements. What our costume may have lost in picturesqueness is made up for by its compactness and utility, says a writer in a recent issue of Gas Logic.

While it is perfectly true that the present-day modes for men are not in the least beautiful, yet they are practical, and only messenger boys and others to whom speed is an indifferent quantity will regret the advent of the little button.

It is really the men who have profited most by the introduction of buttons. All the world knows any woman can manage miracles with a couple of common pins. Women wear buttons for trimming or on sport coats or overcoats, but many of their garments are fastened in other ways, while a man is dependent upon buttons. He cannot use hooks and eyes, snap fasteners, ribbons, fancy pins or any of the many variations permitted a woman.

Late in the thirteenth century buttons were introduced as ornaments and were made of ivory, gold and jewels. Not until Queen Elizabeth's reign was there a button industry, though buttons had begun to serve practical purposes before that time. After George III. ascended the throne gilt buttons were first made. They instantly became popular, though today they are used only for ornaments and upon uniforms.

Early in the nineteenth century the cloth-covered button with a metal shank was introduced, to be followed a few years later by a button which had a canvas tuft instead of a metal shank. This made it easier to sew on, as the needle could be put through in any direction and the button held more firmly in place. Then came buttons covered with silk with a pattern in the middle.

The first button manufacturer in the United States was Samuel Williston of Easthampton. In 1848 his eyesight began to fail and, to support his family, his wife covered little wooden molds with cloth. Williston then fashioned a simple machine which did the work more quickly and just as well and built up a considerable trade, thereby making his fortune.

Today we have buttons of every conceivable material, size and shape. There are the fresh water pearl buttons made from the shells of the unio, a shell fish found along the river bottoms of the Mississippi and its tributaries. Something like 25,000,000 gross of these pearl buttons are produced every year and the annual value of the crop is more than $5,500,000.

Some wag might be interested in the peculiar distribution of the button industry in this country. Button statistics show that Pennsylvania leads in the production of those made of bone; New York City, of brass; Massachusetts, of cloth; Iowa, of fresh water pearl; Connecticutt, of horn; New Hampshire, of paper; and New Jersey, those of vegetable ivory, while Pennsylvania and New York tie in the race to produce the most composition buttons. There are also buttons of gold, silver and other metals, glass, wood, enamel, porcelain and vulcanite.

Probably more "composition" buttons are made than any other, and these are chiefly of celluloid. Large sheets of transparent celluloid are sprayed with a chemical which clouds it over, turning it black. A machine cuts out discs of the required size. If the discs were used as they are they would snap or break, therefore each one in turn spends about one-half a minute on a little steam heated pad. Steam is used because the celluloid must not become too hot and yet there must be sufficient heat to make it pliable. These little pads are heated by means of a gas-fired steam boiler.

The celluloid, together with a cardboard disc, is placed in the machine, which shapes it around the cardboard. Another machine pierces the holes through. For colored buttons lighter colors of celluloid are used and the buttons are placed one by one in a small, rapidly revolving wheel. An attendant with a brush touches a drop of the required color in the center of the whirling button and this quickly spreads coloring the entire button. One manufacturer here in New York City turns out 1,000 gross of these buttons a day. Practically all the buttons are made in a similar way except that some of the machines differ slightly. The entire button output in this country amounts to something over 25,000,000,000 a year.

Freight Market

Messrs. Wheelock and Co. write as follows in their report dated August 12:

The situation in our Outward Freight markets is as follows:

To United Kingdom and Continent:—There is no change to report on this berth since last writing and export cargo continues scarce whilst tonnage is ample for all requirements.

To United States via Pacific and via Panama and Suez:—The situation here is, if possible, worse than when last writing and there is practically no cargo offering for export on any of these berths; we can only infer that the recent rise in exchange is largely responsible for the present state of affairs.

Coastwise:—Since our last Report there has been a small but welcome demand from the North but beyond this the market has remained dull; prospects for the next few weeks are poor until the new season's crops of rice and beans come into the market.

BRANDEIS QUELLS ZIONIST UPROAR

Excluded Delegates At Meeting Attempt To Force Their Way In

London, July 8.—An attempt by a number of delegates to force their way into the Zionist conference today, after an attendant had denied them admission, interrupted the conference for a short time and precipitated a struggle which continued for several minutes.

The clamor for admission arose outside the hall, and the Chairman, Louis D. Brandeis, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, suspended the business of the conference until order was restored.

It was later reported that the disturbance arose out of "a confusion of tongues." The delegates, so it was explained, speak various languages.

When quiet was obtained Justice Brandeis appealed for unanimity, saying it was essential for the delegates to consider their work seriously.

The appointment of committees began amid great excitement among the delegates, who protested in many languages against some of the proposals.

The conference this afternoon appointed a Policy Committee, consisting of twenty-one members, to frame a political program for observance in Palestine. This was done in accordance with a suggestion by Dr. Weizman, a member of the Palestine Commission appointed by King George, who urged the necessity of a common method of procedure by all races there to avoid conflicts of faiths and peoples.

The committee is expected to report next Monday. The Colonisation, Education and Finance Committees, which also were appointed today, will report at the same time.

Preparations were declared to be progressing for the establishment of a Jewish university in Jerusalem, which "must be built up gradually, although a small beginning must be made in the near future."

It is expected that several years will be required to complete a building necessary to house the research institutes for physics, chemistry, micro-biology and the Hebrew language, which will be the first efforts of the Educational Committee, and the establishment probably will be opened in 1922.

The committee reported that it was undertaking to acquire a Faculty for the University of Jerusalem and for the Haifa Technical College.

Owing to the tendency of the delegates to make their discussions too long, a time limit for all speeches has been put into effect.

The typhoon will go away to the South of the Kuriles. Considerable heat and local thunderstorms along our coasts.

A New Roosevelt!

SOME indication of the powerful support Franklin Delano Roosevelt, democratic nominee for the vice presidency, is going to give to Gov. James Monroe Cox who heads the ticket, is revealed in his speech of acceptance, briefly reported by Reuter's. His hammer-like appeal for the League of Nations will swing thousands of wavering voters into line for the Democratic Party. Nowhere have we seen this particular argument more potently put:

"We must open our eyes and see that it is impossible to avoid, except by monastic seclusion, those honorable and intimate foreign relations which the fearful-hearted shudderingly miscall international complications."

When America was a small, newly-born nation struggling to get to its feet, it was warned by Washington, Jefferson and the other revered Father to avoid "entangling foreign alliances" and there was solid, irrefutable logic and reason back of the warning. Even powerful Great Britain followed that policy through long stretches of years.

But time brings change. Great Britain had to abandon her fixed policy of "splendid isolation." She didn't want to do it; had to do it. It was forced upon her by the changed conditions in continental Europe. She faced the new program boldly under Edward VII.

And now the time has come for America to abandon her age-long policy of "splendid isolation." The urge in America's case is not the same that prevailed upon Britain, though to some degree it does run parallel. Britain was trying to form a balance of power that would prevent Germany from plunging Europe into war. The Entente with France and Russia, it was thought, would be formidable enough to keep the peace.

But it wasn't. The powder-house which Europe so laboriously had erected caught fire and blew up and it is with the dire results of this disaster that America now has to deal. When the papers report a Messina earthquake or a San Francisco fire the whole world wishes to succor the survivors and rebuild the stricken cities, just as when your neighbor's house burns you offer your generous and sympathetic help.

What has happened to Europe is the Messina earthquake and the San Francisco fire multiplied a million times, and unless America helps now there is every reason to believe it will happen again. All the history of Europe supports the belief that Europe of its own accord cannot prevent the recurrence of these disastrous wars. More than once Europe has wiped itself out. And now that Great Britain has been drawn into the maelstrom, her weight on one side or the other is of less avail than it was in 1914, and in that year it was not strong enough to prevent the disaster.

Europe is fact, to state the matter frankly, has lost all conception of what peace is. Europe, one might almost say, never has known peace. She has known only war or preparations for war, only hate piled on hate. And it seems to us, when we view the terrible situation she faces today, that only the voice and hand and heart of a powerful outsider, can ever avail to bring her to peace and its manifold blessings.

This being so, the appeal which her present plight must make to humanitarian America becomes irresistible. Fortunately America is no longer the weak and struggling nation she was when Washington spoke. She is rich and powerful beyond anything that Washington could have dreamt, and with the acquisition of this wealth and power, she has, we believe, suffered no diminution in the fervency of her devotion to the principles and ideals that called her into being. So far as they are concerned she stands just where she stood under Washington. And notwithstanding his warning of long ago, when America was changing from her colonial knickerbockers into long pants, who with knowledge of the character of Washington, can doubt what he would advise, were he sitting in the White House of today!

The Little Boy

I have a sunny kitchen, with the door
Wide to the green June world; an apple tree
Looks in at the broad window, pleasantly,
And scatters golden pennies on my floor.
I have a breakfast table, neatly set
With all the good and proper things it ought—
A bowl of honeysuckle, freshly brought,
And little garden roses sweet and wet.
And, too, a little boy have I,
And in my kitchen's all my earth and sky ....
Until the paper comes, and all the world comes, too,
With party politics and wars and Kings,
With wit and fashions, all disturbing things,
And sorrow — sorrow woven through and through.
Then, as I read, my kitchen disappears,
A little boy, above his porridge bowl,
Becomes a gaunt and worn and tattered soul,
Fighting alone the strange and sordid years.
And I, who fain would shield him well—
Is my bright kitchen a strong citadel?
Such pebbles come into a woman's hand,
Intead of rocks—frail pebbles, like a stream's,
Almost like shells, with little rainbow gleams.
And will these build a fortress that will stand?
Only the goodness of fresh buttered bread,
Forgiveness for a stocking torn in play,
High celebration on a holiday,
The evening charm of stories told or read,
"Surprises" from each little journey brought,
The graciousness of "parties" 'neath the tree,
And at the elders' parties, cambric tea,
Just to assure that one is not forgot—
These, and a kitchen sweet with sun, have I,
My little boy to shield and fortify.
Some whimsic memory, in a day apart,
To sweetness and to faith may save his heart

War With England

(By Pastor Felix)

Ill fall the head, on either shore
That hears the dark Atlantic roar,
Would it a strife of blood behold
Between the New Land and the Old.

Ill fall the hand that would once more
Unloose the hideous dogs of war.
And call for treasure and for life
In fratricidal party strife.

Woe wait the heart that hath preferred
The bitter and the hateful word—
Word that would shot and sword release—
To reconciling word of peace.

A malison on him of state,
However lofty, wise or great,
Who works with malice at bye-ends,
To make men foes who should be friends;—

Who would let loose a world's despair,—
Wide wreckage from the realms of air;
And wake a hate with woe and pain,
That never should be hushed again.

A curse upon his life must fall—
Resentment and reproach of all—
Who calls on War to break in blood
The bond of English brotherhood.

IT'S TOUGH TO BE A HAS-BEEN BUT A NEVER-WAS IS FIERCE

He started life as a baby. He had the good fortune to get born, in this respect he was just like you and me. From boyhood every one could see that he was going to be a nobody. He didn't like school, and he didn't like work. In sport he couldn't do anything except stand up and be a goal post. He went to work and rose from one department to another, until you could see he was just ordinary. As soon as he got too old they started moving him down department by department. Then came the day when he went off, paid his rates, drank a glass of water, braced himself up and then died. Over his tomb they placed this last token of esteem:

"He came, he saw, he died."

TELEPHONE TIPS

Treated kindly the telephone is the finest instrument in existence. It is also the most polite. Indeed it rarely answers back even when spoken to.

* * *

Generally speaking—which a telephone isn't—a telephone should be seen and not heard.

* * *

It is not considered polite when giving Exchange a number to tell the operator to hurry as you have an engagement next week.

* * *

When you get a reply from Exchange do not get excited and invite your friends round to visit the affair. Remain quite dignified just as if nothing really serious had happened.

* * *

Should the operator give you the right number do not brag about it or get irritated. Remember that accidents will happen.

* * *

When unable to get attention ask for 499. This lady will be always willing to help you to get through to the wrong number.

HOW TO TEMPT LANDLORDS

(An advertiser offers to bequeath his valuable collection of pictures and curios to any landlord who will let him a house at a reasonable rent.)

Grant me my soul's ambition
A tenement for three,
Select in its position
With bathroon (h and c).
And if the rent's not too sharp
As guerdon meet for you,
I'll bring my little Jews Harp
And play you "Hitchy Koo."
E'en though the paper's peeling
And there is not a trace
Of whitewash on the ceiling,
I think we'll take the place;
And pay (though not in rhino)
A bonus and a half
When father lays the lino
We'll let you come and laugh.
In short, there's no revealing
The many things we'll do
To show the grateful feeling
We're harboring for you.
Our gratitude shall (maybe)
Reward you cent for cent,
We'll let you hold the baby
First time you call for rent.

-:- American Fliers In Poland -:-

(New York Times)

Stories of the grit and determination of the corps of young American aviators now fighting the Bolsheviki under the White Eagle of Poland as the "Koseiuszko Squadron" are being brought to Washington by Americans returning from abroad.

Among others, Hugh S. Gibson, the American Minister to Poland, who is now on leave in this country, pays his tribute to the courage and self-sacrifice of the American fliers, who are serving Poland in battered and unsafe Austrian planes, for the equivalent of about seven dollars a month in American money.

The commanding officer of the squadron is Major Cedric E. Fauntleroy of Chicago, about thirty-two years old and standing some six feet two. Mr. Gibson says it is chiefly due to the undaunted courage and optimism of Major Fauntleroy that the squadron is what it is.

"Fauntleroy is a fine fellow," said Mr. Gibson. "He kept his men enthusiastic and willing all through the hard Winter, when half the time they were in snow up to their waists and rations were slim. He and Captain Merton C. Cooper of Jacksonville, Fla., the second in command, are the two dynamos that drive the squadron. I do not know all the other men in the corps, but I understand they are all of similar calibre and resolution."

From time to time scattered press despatches have told something of the American fliers who have spent part of their time trying to coax the "Bolshies" into the air, and other long hours in wearying through the cold Winter of Poland when flying is impossible, because the planes cannot take off from the snowy ground. Fauntleroy was, before the armistice, chief testing pilot at Issoudon, had made more than 4,000 flights and was a member of Eddie Rickenbacker's "Hat in the Ring" squadron. Captain Cooper, a pilot of the 20th Aero Squadron, was shot down in flames in the Argonne, taken prisoner by the Germans and held in a prison camp until December, 1918. Other members of the Kosciuszko outfit are Captain A. H. Kelly of Richmond, Va.; Captain Edward Corsi of Brooklyn, Captain Paul Brewster of Baltimore, Lieutenant George M. Crawford of Wilmington, Del.; Lieutenant Kenneth Shrewsbury of Charleston, West Va.; Lieutenant Chrl Clark of Tulsa, Okla.; Lieutenant Elliott W. Chess of El Paso and Lieutenant Edwin Noble of Boston.

A letter from Major Fauntleroy says the organisation of the squadron was due to a chance meeting between Cooper and himself, on the streets of Toul, in January, 1919. At the time, Fauntleroy, who was in command of the 137th American Squadron, believed that Cooper had been killed when he was reported missing in the Agronne.

"Coop," said Major Fauntleroy, "was full of a new idea of forming a squadron to fight the Bolsheviki. It seems that he had been sent across Germany to a hospital in German Poland. There he met dozens of Russians. From these he learned what Bolshevism really was—that it was a force which, if not checked, would eventually threaten the world. He was very keen to take an American squadron to Archangel, or if this failed, to form a squadron of American to join the Poles."

For a time nothing was done, and the American Army in France melted away. Both Cooper and Fauntleroy went their ways, separately entering the Polish service. On the day of the Victory parade in Paris they chanced to meet again, and decided to renew their project of forming an American squadron. After disheartening delays they succeeded. On August 26, 1919, General Roswedowski, Chief of the Polish Military Mission in France, gave them authority to enlist seven pilots and two observers to be formed into the Kosciuszko Squadron, in memory of the Polish patriot who served on George Washington's staff. The next difficulty was to find the pilots.

"Both Coop and I resolved to stake what capital we had on making the squadron a success," continues Fauntleroy," so we pooled our funds and went to it. Our first recruit was Lieutenant Crawford, who had just returned from Riga and Mitau in North Russia. He had come back literally appalled by the horrors of Bolshevist rule, under which nearly all the people with whom he had to deal had suffered. Our next recruit we kidnapped. First Lieutenant Kenneth Shrewsbury had just been demobilised in France and was starting on a tour of the world.

"Cooper then made a trip to England for the purpose of enlisting American pilots who might be stranded there. He was lucky enough to find Captain A. H. Kelly of Richmond, Va., one of the few survivors of the 96th Aero Squadron, and a leading observer in the American Army. Following Captain Kelly, Captain Paul Brewster of Baltimore, Md., an American pilot with the British Army, enlisted. In France we enlisted Captain Edward J. Corsi, who had served with the Lafayette Flying Corps, and Lieutenant Carl Clark, who had also seen service with the French. Here for a while we stuck. The few American pilots left in France did not appear anxious to go to war for $35 per month, as Polish exchange was at that time."

Eventually the squadron was formed, and just as it was about to start for Poland, Premier Paderewski, then in Paris, invited the men to tea at the Ritz. In his excellent English, he said to the Americans:

"Words cannot express the feeling of gratitude which I have in my heart when I see you young men leaving to fight for my country. I can only promise that Poland will never forget it."

One of the Kosciuszko Squadron, Lieutenant Edmund Graves, of Brookline, Mass., had the honor of being the first American officer to meet death in a Polish uniform. Graves, a Harvard 1913 man, met his death when the city of Lemberg was celebrating the first anniversary of its regained freedom, just a year after the Ukrainians had been driven out. Although the Lieutenant was tired out from a long patrol on the front, he joined his squadron in an exhibition. The right wing of the American pilot's Austrian plane broke while he was executing a "double roll" at the height of only 150 feet. Graves instantly tore off his safety belt and jumped. But the altitude was insufficient, and just as the parachute began to open the aviator struck the ground and was killed. By a remarkable chance, the airplane itself crashed into the roof of the palace of Count Potocki, the home of the American Red Cross in Galicia, a resulting fire completely destroying the building.

The spirit and zeal of the American fliers are reflected in this statement by Major Fauntleroy:

"Poland is far, far away from the United States, and I often wonder how many of the people at home realise that this struggling young republic is really fighting the battle of our own country against the Red terror. If anything that I can do will help to make my country realise what Poland is doing for the world, I will consider that the hardships and casualties which this squadron might suffer will have been a thousand times worth while. Only those who have been here can possibly realise what a gallant fight Poland is making. With her soldiers half-clad and more than half-starved, with thousands of, them barefooted or with rags around their feet instead of shoes; short of arms, short of ammunition, short of everything in the way of war material, they have driven back the Bolsheviki and have held the line of civilisation intact. If Poland fails, nothing can stop the wave of Bolshevism sweeping across Europe. Then the thousands of miles of sea which separate our own country from this continent will not be broad enough to stop the onward sweep of the insidious ideas and propaganda of the Bolsheviki, which have already made Russia a land of starvation, disease, poverty and terror."

LESSON FOR THOSE AT HOME

Captain Cooper's ardor and earnestness rival that of Fauntleroy's. When George Palmer Putnam of The American Legion Weekly asked Cooper in Warsaw, "What'll I tell them back home?" Captain Cooper replied:

"Tell 'em home is just about right. Tell 'em if folks ever get discontented with things back there they ought to have a look at Central Europe—and then thank God for America, and put their backs into the fight to keep America sane. And tell them, if they will turn to and help Poland a bit, there's a lot of Yankees over here, and more Poles, who will appreciate it. Poland's a first class bet, and don't you forget it."

Young Captain Cooper—he is under thirty—is described by Minister Gibson as "straight as a string," and possessing a compelling personality. As his hands had been badly burned when he was shot down in the Argonne, he was unable to fly for a time, and so took charge of distributing food for the Hoover forces in Lemberg. He is said to have exercised a firm hand, and to have resisted all overtures for favors, with such positiveness and such "direct Americanness," that he won respect even from the old Polish nobles and officials, men of ancient and proud lineage.

"Every man in the squadron has a record to be proud of, but the only way to dig it out is to question the other fellow," writes Mr. Putnam. "There are no advertisers in the squadron; also its members are not 'soldiers of fortune.' At least there is not a shadow of mercenary attraction in Polish military service, as a top Sergeant in Uncle Sam's army draws down about as much as the Minister of War in Warsaw. The pay of a Captain is 800 marks a month, and at the present rate of exchange a mark is worth less than one cent. At $7 or so a month it's certainly no get-rich-quick party. Also, it's no fun at all to go through a Russian Winter, with a half-starving country behind one, and Lenin and Trotsky's gang on the other side of the line—not to mention those aggravating memories which must come at times of friends back here in the U. S. A. getting three square meals daily, and top-notch pay envelopes, and most of us howling for a bonus, too.

"Why are they doing it? That question I asked each of them in one way or another. The answers were double-barreled, and pretty much the same.

"'We're here because we're for Poland and against Bolshevism!'"

Another man who has seen the Kesciusko Squadron has only praise for it. This is Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin F. Castle, who writes from Posen to the periodical, "U. S. Air Service," as follows:

"It is evident to the casual military observer that the morale of the squadron is excellent. The reason for this is not far to seek and is found in the methods adopted by its efficient commanding officer, Major Fauntleroy.

"Wonders have been done for the squadron by the American Red Cross in the way of clothing and bedding for the enlisted men. There is therefore no great need of material things—a little moral support from the United States Air Service will help."

Castle proceeds to discourage the formation of a volunteer squadron to go to Poland and to be supported by funds to be collected in the United States. He says that rumors of such an undertaking have reached the ears of the Kosciuszko Squadron, who also hear that the officers of the new squadron are to be paid $250 per month, as against the present pay of the men in the Fauntleroy outfit.

"They are not complaining about their present pay," said Colonel Castle. "On the contrary, they all emphasise the fact that they did not come to Poland to make money, but to fight. However, they think it will be very hurtful to the morals of their outfit to have another American squadron come out here and commence work under materially better financial conditions. I ask you, therefore, to find out what has been done regarding a new squadron, and to ask the organisers to write to Major Fauntleroy, care American Embassy, Warsaw, before anything further is done."

The latest word concerning the squadron that has reached Washington tells of its adoption of a mascot in the shape of Jan Wronerski, a little Polish boy of Lwow, where the squadron is stationed. "Jan's story makes Henty's heroes look tame in comparison," Captain Cooper wrote in a recent letter. When the Ukrainians took Lwow, Jan was living twenty miles away in the country. He stole through the lines and into the city, acting for twenty-two days as a soldier of the line and as despatch bearer. For carrying despatches through the lines he gained a citation for bravery. The next day he was cited again for working his way into an enemy stronghold and reporting the disposition of their troops. Two days later he was captured in his home but released, the Ukrainians not believing a twelve-year-old boy was of any danger to them.

He returned to the Polish lines and fought until the Ukrainians were driven from Lwow. Then he acted as a bicycle despatch rider. At one time he was cut off by fifteen Ukrainian infantrymen, and, jumping from his bicycle, defended himself for an hour until help arrived. For this deed he was promoted to Corporal on the field. The Kosciuszko squadron has now put him in a boarding school and has formally adopted him.

The Tender Sweet Pea And The Heartless Mandarin

I saw a frail sweet pea, poor thing,
Whose owner had forgot to give.
Her some support by which to cling—
It seemed she feared she would not live.

She stretched her tiny tendrils, held
Them clutching the unhelpful air;
And I, observing, felt impelled
To speak quite sternly to her there.

Come, use your power of will, O pea,
Nor pusillanimously appeal:
Aye, Pelmanize, aspire, and be
More masterful, like Mr. Creel.

Her tender form could stand no more;
She sank. I heard her cry for hours
"Please call the Association for Preventing Cruelty to Flowers."

Love The Great Magician

How A Rich Girl Met Her Fate

BY A. MARIA CRAWFORD

It was late June in the heart of a blossoming world, and the girl in the white sport skirt and turquois silk sweater, standing on the steps of the wide winged, ornate stone house, seemed the very embodiment of youth and joy and the Summer time of life. Just as she stepped into her rakish-looking yellow roadster, she heard a familiar voice, startlingly near at hand, in a greeting.

"Going my way?" questioned the tall, good-looking young man at the driveway gate.

Rebecca flushed in the most unaccountable way and brought her car to an easy stop. "Yes," she laughed then. "Which way are you traveling?"

Then they looked at each other and smiled in the little, understanding manner of youth. As the car shot down the elm-lined street, she flung a question over her silken-clad shoulder. "Are you going to the church?"

"Yes, to write my sermon for next Sunday. And you?"

She kept her blue eyes steadily on the road ahead. A sudden wave of crimson flamed to the edge of her hair. "I—I promised to go to the church circle meeting today."

"I'm so glad. That's fine of you."

There was no mistaking the warmth in his soft, musical voice. Rebecca's heart was light and glad in her breast. She put on the brake and they slid noiselessly to the curbing before the chapel door. "I won't be a drone," she told him then. "If I belong. I am going to try to do my part. None of the girls would come with me. They said that only old ladies ever came.

"You're going to change that, aren't you? Perhaps, if we work hard, you and I can interest the young people and change the old order of things!"

There were a number of women standing in groups before the chapel. Rebecca was subtly and instantly aware of their curious, speculative interest in her. "We're so surprised to see you here," several of them told her, casting significant glances toward the handsome young preacher who had lately come to minister to their spiritual needs.

Rebecca wished that she had stayed at home. The girls had been right about it. There were only old ladies there, intolerant souls who thought that she had only come because of the minister.

"Are you going to have tea and cookies when the meeting is over?" asked the minister boyishly. "If you do, please don't forget that I am in the study!" He looked at Rebecca when he said that and she felt rather than saw the little electric spark that flashed from fading eye to fading eye.

TOO LATE TO CHANGE

She determined that she would never go to one of the meetings again. Like many another indifferent soul, she had come under the spell of the fiery young apostle who had made the straight and narrow way of right living so attractive that she was not only willing but also anxious to obey his dramatic appeal, issued from the pulpit the Sunday before, "Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it."

And the girl, in the glad eagerness of idealistic youth that longs with the burning zeal of a Sir Galahad to serve, had felt the stirring of stifled conscience and once roused was reaching gropingly toward the light that illumines the world for those who have eyes to see. If the personal equation had entered into that desire, might it not have been so ordained by a kindly Providence?

Rebecca listened to the comments of the women when the roll was called. "Mary Karns won't do anything," said one officious member when that young woman's name was read. "She does society too much to attend to the Lord's work. She's too much interested in clothes and styles."

Rebecca pondered on that. Had they forgotten youth, its natural desire, old as time, to look as well as possible? When she was as old as they were, would she wear run over shoe heels and let her thinning hair go stringing down the back of her neck as the self appointed judge of Mary Karns was doing.

Would she be intolerant of youth? Would she forget that youth is brief and that it is like the magic dust on a butterfly's fluttering wings soon lost, never to be recovered? Would she smugly sanctimonious, question the motive of any girl who sought to take her place and do her part in the great scheme of things? Why didn't church members make the work attractive to young people if they really wanted them to be interested? Rebecca determined that she would never let life wrap her in such a hard shell crust.

"Who do you suppose sent all those lilies to the church on Easter Sunday?" asked old Mrs. Barton curiously. "No card or anything on them."

"Oh, likely enough it was some girl who's in love with the new preacher," shrewdly surmised another, turning watery eyes on Rebecca.

Of course, Rebecca flushed, for she had spent a quarter of her generous monthly allowance for lilies to bank the alter on Easter Sunday, and nobody, not even her mother, had known. If she chose to spend her money that way and not let her right hand know what her left hand was doing she considered that it was her own affair.

She had felt a miraculous lifting of her spirit as she listened to the beautiful story of the resurrection, and so impressionable is the sensitive soul of youth, so quick to visualise a dream, that she felt as if she had placed those snowy, fragrant lilies on the tomb of Christ.

HER ONLY FAULT

"That's the only fault I've got to find with having a young man for a preacher," suggested an old lady with a flower-wreathed hat slightly awry on her small, slick head. "You never can tell how sincere the girls are in their religion as long as he is around. A girl will do most anything to get a good-looking beau."

Then some bustlingly important matron came in with a wide tray on which a huge pitcher of iced tea tinkled invitingly. Rebecca's subdued offer to help was almost completely ignored. They were used to doing it, thank her just the same, they said. So when the Reverend Billy Caswell came in, smiling eagerly and looking around inquiringly for the pretty girl in the turquoise sweater, she had vanished.

An hour later, in the fragrant, flower scented coolness of a shaded room in her beautiful home, he asked Rebecca why she ran away.

"I couldn't stay there a minute longer," she told him frankly. "Why, why do old ladies criticise everything that a girl does? Instead of helping us to be serious-minded and to do our part in the church work, they antagonise us because they question our motives. How can they know what is in our hearts? I am never going to one of those meetings again."

"Don't you want to do your part in the church work?" His soft voice was arrestive, quieting to her.

She lifted troubled eyes to his. "Yes, I want to do something worth while, now while I am young. I don't want to wait until I am worn out with the things of the world before I begin."

She had been putting some tea roses in an old blue bowl when he came in, and she got up suddenly and went back to her pleasant task. Billy Caswell came to stand beside her.

"I love you," he said and put his hands on her shoulders.

They were warm, strong young hands and they seemed to reach down, down to her heart that trembled with joy. "I can't give you all the luxury that you have here at home," he told her simply. "but I love you and if you love me it will be enough." How confident is youth, how brave! He drew her nearer, but before his lips touched hers, she put her hands on his broad breast and pushed back from him.

"I—I do love you," she sobbed. "but those women—Oh, they would pick me to pieces. I am afraid."

"With me?" His voice had always been like that to her, soothng, quieting a spirit that had been eternally restless until he came.

She looked up at him, tears on her long, curling lashes.

"Afraid—with me?" he asked again.

And suddenly Rebecca knew, knew that with him she could meet and meet bravely any issue that life offered to her. With his arms around her, she saw only a golden pathway that led straight to the stars.

For the time being, she was mercifully ignorant that the world is filled with the same kind of people who long ago fashioned a crown of thorns and that still, unthinkingly, intolerantly, they thrust thorns into the quivering flesh of many who come to minister in His name.

AN ULTIMATUM

"I want a Tibetan Fox Skin and that's all there is to it. Why Lilly has a Tibetan Fox Skin and you should see the difference between it and the other fox skins. If you don't go to the Chinese Post Office and buy a money order for $25 and mail it at once to Mr. Elly Widler, Ta Tsing-Lu, Szechwan Province, I shall never speak to you again. Now here's a kiss and be a good boy and don't forget to write to Widler for that fox skin."

There is no other skin like a Tibetan Fox Skin.

Oyster Culture

The problem of oyster culture continues to be of such critical importance that the United States Bureau of Fisheries has been impelled to devote to their solution as great a measure of its resource as could legitimately be applied to one object. While the investigations have not been localised more than was essential for the accomplishment of useful results, the primary seat of activities has been in the vicinity of Milford, Conn., where a temporary field laboratory is maintained for studies of the oyster.

Examination of the waters of this region revealed the fact that a large number, perhaps more than one half of the leased grounds have ceased to be worked because of the small yield of oysters thereon, which is due in turn, to the general failure of set, says the bureau. The strike of set during the past two years has been practically negligible, consequently the investigation has been directed primarily toward ascertaining the cause of the failure of the set.

Following suggestions arising from earlier investigations, it was endeavored in 1918 to work out suitable methods for following up the movements of the oyster larvae, with a view of ascertaining just where to place cultch immediately before the time for spatting or setting to occur. The centrifugal machine used during the season of 1917 for separating larvae from the water was largely superseded this year by a series of screens or sieves of copper-wire cloth of successive stages of fineness, from 400 to 200 meshes to the inch. Passing samples of water through the sieves seems to yield as satisfactory results as the centrifuge in separating the oyster larvae from other objects of different sizes, besides possessing the advantage of roughly classifying the larvae according to size and age.

The first free-swimming larvae were found July 16, 1918. The period of greatest abundance was from August 9 to 26, and none was observed after August 30. As the larvae were found to be free-swimming for a period of about twenty days, it is evident, says the bureau, that the bulk of the spawning occurred about August 1. Set was found during the last week in August on most of the beds of water not over four or five fathoms deep, but practically all of this set died, except that which attached in the very early part of the season.

"A tentative conclusion drawn from this investigation," says the bureau, "is that it is of prime importance to secure an early setting, such as results from the spawning of oysters in the shallow and warmer waters of harbors and mouths of rivers. Since it is just such beds that are generally most affected by pollution in the form of sewage and trade wastes, which may be fatal to the life of free-swimming larvae, it is evident that the matter of the possible effect of pollution on the occurrence of oyster set demands serious consideration. With the co-operation of the water laboratory of the Bureau of Chemistry studies have been undertaken with regard to the nature and the effect of the pollutants introduced in the shallow waters."

Further investigations relating to the natural propagation of oysters have been conducted in Great South Bay L. J. and Narragansett Bay, R. J.

The bureau says that a very serious condition has manifested itself in oyster beds of a large section of the York River in Virginia, where for several years the oysters have been rendered virtually valueless for market. Examinations of the oysters revealed that they were affected with a green coloration associated with watery and lean meats. This condition is quite distinct from that known as "green gill" and does not appear to be in all respects of the character of greening which in other localities has been attributed to the storage of copper.

11.—The typhoon inclines gradually towards the NE, between the Loochoos and the Bonin: the cyclonic whirl does not appear yet to have been violent around it. Very light unsteady breezes with calms along our coasts. The heat at Shanghai has been oppressive during long hours of dead calm. Thunderstorm at Ningpo.

12.—Weather fine and cloudy: fairly damp. Pressure stationary below the normal level. Light breezes of the SW quadrant.

New Tax Causes Paris To Lose Jazz Artists

Paris, July 3.—Two thousand jazz band artists, mostly from America, and other orchestras were thrown out of employment today when the managers of cafes, restaurants and hotels decided that Minister of Finance Marnal's additional 25 percent tax levy for this feature was impossible to meet without arousing public discontent by doubling the prices of meals and drinks. Even the tea dances are affected, and it is predicted that within a week it will be impossible to dance save in public halls. Theaters also provide interesting objections to the new taxes, the chief being that they will make it too expensive to send out deadhead tickets.

Bobby And Wife Win Matrimonial Bacon

Three Couples Claim 'Dunmow Flitch' Prize Near London

London, July 3.—The famous old Court of "Dunmow Flitch," first established in 1244, which awards a flitch of bacon to the couple that can take oath they have lived together for a year and a day without a jar or a quarrel and that neither had wished the knot untied, was held again on Whit Monday at Ilford, five miles northeast of London. Three couples appeared as claimants, a schoolmaster and his wife, a painter and his wife and a policeman and his wife.

They appealed through attorneys, who were formally attired, to the judge of the court who wore a crimson robe like that worn by a judge in the High Court. The flitch of bacon was awarded to the policeman and his wife, who had been married seventeen years and had three children. In the pleading before the award, however, the painter and his wife offered to bring 150 witnesses who would support their case. The court recommended "mercy" in the shape of two fine gammons of bacon to both the painter and the schoolmaster couples.

The attorneys for the claimants to the flitch were aided by two women whose business it was to see that there were no matrimonial technicalities or subterfuges involved in any of the cases with which counsel was not acquainted.

New Commander Of Marine Corps

MAJOR GEN. LEJEUNE INTL

Major-General John A. Lejeune, who has been appointed by Secretary Daniels commander of the United States Marine Corps, succeeding Major-General Barnett. General Lejeune was commander of the Second Division, U. S. A., during the war. He was the first Marine Corps officer to command a regular army division.

Princess To Educate Chess Prodigy Of 8

Paris, July 3.—Samuel Rzessewski, aged 8, is the happiest boy in Paris today. He has not only succeeded in defeating the greatest chess players of France, Germany, Italy and England, but has attracted the attention of Princess George of Greece, who has expressed the intention of educating the youthful prodigy.

Samuel is like any American youngster of his age with a fondness for outdoors and an abhorrence of books, but the Princess believes he can be induced to study if the dull routine of daily lessons is eliminated. She has conferred with Dr. Lebon, the greatest French psychologist, regarding the boys training. The latter believes that Samuel's faculty of reasoning is replaced by an exceptional capacity for intuition, and this will be taken into account when the young Russian devotes his time to the intricate problems of geometry instead of playing kings and pawns on the checker board.
